*Where stately oaks and broad magnolias
Shade inspiring halls,*

There stands our dear old Alma Mater . . .

*From September to June, the Old War Skule is a lively place, full of wonderful people and wonderful times—
clubs and exams and parties and projects
—but most of all, the students.*

Who to us recalls . . .

Confusion, confusion, as these girls unpack the multitude of essentials for their year at college.

Mothers are the worrying kind, so the phone booths overflow with reassuring calls back home.

... fond memories

From the corners of the country, from the north, the south, the east, and the west come the students. From the corners of the world, from Mexico, Japan, South America, and India come the students. By boat and bus, train and plane, they flock to the campus. And the ensuing scene is one of near riot. Cars must be unloaded, rooms located, and roommates met and given the once-over. Lost trunks need tracking down, and clothes must be strategically crammed into post-age-sized closets. From the upperclassmen dorms sound screams and shouts of "Long time no see!" and "Where are all those letters you promised?" The freshmen dorms resound with cries of delight and homesickness, with many long distance calls home to "Tell Mom I got here okay," and with the wonder of making new friendships. Similar noises echo down the long halls of the Stadium, and the fraternity houses come to life after the dormant summer. From end to end, the campus hums with activity in the shimmering September heat as the students pour in to begin their long year of work and play. For the freshmen the year begins with a little of both as they . . .

Notice the contrast between what boys bring for a year at school and how much girls deem necessary.

Entering the hallowed halls of the boys' dorm, these LSU students prepare to settle down for the year.

One of the many activities during Orientation Week drew these freshman boys to the Greek theater.

A really high class orchestra entertains the "dogs" with smashing success at an Orientation Week assembly.

. . . participate in Orientation Week. An exciting round of parties and programs, it is designed to introduce the newcomers to LSU. The girls are taken under the wing of the Freshman Advisors who guide them through the week. The boys are taken under the wing of the military who just guide them. The "dogs" attend panels and assemblies to give them an idea of the meaning and purpose of a university. They are entertained by the Student Centers and learn of the religious side of campus life. Watermelon in abundance is served at the YW-YMCA party following the Pigskin Preview, where frosh meet gridiron members. Bald heads and pony tails are paired off for the events under the watchful eyes of the advisors. Probably the most participated-in event of the week is the physical-taking party. Some people may disagree that it's a party, but participated-in it is. Long lines of nervous freshmen wait impatiently to get through, hoping that maybe it's all a bad dream. While the freshmen are still in the party mood, they are whirled through . . .

This group of freshman boys has fallen victim to the charms of the Field House as they take a break in the week's activities.

Ah, the Military. Here it has managed to assemble as attractive a bunch of bald heads as can be found on campus.

Guests at the Phi Mu "Gold Rush Party" were entertained by this quintet of crooners during Rush week.

This Under the Sea theme was one of the many clever ideas used at the parties in order to entertain the rushees.

. . . Greek Rush weeks. Sororities begin these with their week of parties for rushing. The new girls are introduced to the Greek societies for college women through a busy itinerary of events. Sorority teas are held every other day, alternating with days of rush dates. The Panhellenic building overflows with long lines of girls waiting to pick up their invitations, and the midnight oil is burned profusely at the active meetings. Welcoming smiles belie the aching feet of the smiler as every attempt is made to please the rushee, who is "queen for the day." Outside of Panhellenic occurs the most colossal traffic jam of the year when the multitude of cars arrive and leave for rush dates. This is somewhat complicated by the curious passers-by (usually male) who don't just pass by, but stop and look awhile. Toward the end of the week, the rushees sign preference cards, and the long nervous wait begins. Three days of silence are observed while the bids are filed, and then comes the day of jubilee. With shaking hands, the rushees receive their little white envelopes containing the bids, and joyously rush to their chosen rooms. While the excitement of sorority rush week still pervades the campus, attention turns to . . .

Four smiling rushees pause a moment during a party to grin for the camera.

There's nothing like a floor show, complete with band and hoofers to make a party a success say the BSO's.

Cheesecake a la Phi Mu is shown as these Can-Can dancers show that they can. Can what? Can-Can, of course.

... fraternity rush week. The Campanile steps become the meeting place for members and rushees before they leave for rush dates. Rivaling the Panhellenic traffic jam, the cars congregate to chauffeur the boys to the frat house for lunch or perhaps to someone's home for a party. Strictly stag, the afternoon gatherings help rushees to meet members and look over each fraternity. When evening falls, though, the scene changes somewhat. The houses light up, the rush girls arrive, and the parties begin. Rushees are treated to the taste of fraternity social life as friendly handshakes and attractive rush girls greet them at every door. After a week of revelry interspersed with serious talks about fraternity life, the rushees sign their preference cards. Shortly after, the bids are distributed, and the campus again buzzes with the excitement of "who went what." With the rush weeks drawing to a close, the campus is swept into a new activity, . . .

Afternoons at the frat houses give the rushees a chance to meet their prospective fraternity brothers.

"How about a dance?" And the rush girls gladly oblige as they assist the fraternity boys in rush week.

These rushees seem to be getting a thorough indoctrination during one of their visits to the frat house.

Dancing is always a popular pastime at the rush parties and with good music and pretty rush girls, why not?

A congestion forms at the doorway of the house as the freshman, rush girls and members get acquainted.

Counselors advise some puzzled freshmen and upperclassmen about the choice of subjects to take.

. . . the awesome registration. Green freshmen, wary sophomores, knowing juniors and worldly seniors flock to plan their schedules for the coming year. As the day wears on, no disguise is attempted for aching feet. Exclamations of delight "You mean I don't have to take Trig?" and of despair ("Eight o'clock Saturday morning!") echo throughout the Gym. Harried faculty members, frustrated upperclassmen and utterly confused freshmen are thrown together during the day. Slowly and unsurely, the day progresses. Classes are scheduled, unscheduled and rescheduled. Section cards are lost and retrieved. Eventually the students wend their way to the deep, dark recesses of Himes Hall where the dreaded fees are paid. They are waylaid midway by the Student Center tables and flooded with Campus Security propaganda at the door. One last detail remains—the trip to the bookstore. More lines form, and the bookstore overflows with purchasers. Groans go up as they buy $12.00 Chemistry books. (Naturally the text for the course will be changed next year—no refund.) Empty-pocketed but full-handed, the students rise bright and early the next morning . . .

It's a long, long way to Tipperary, and it's almost that long to the head of the registration lines.

Don't look so glum boys; it's only the military and Uncle Sam needs you. Nevertheless, there's not a smile in the crowd.

No, checkers isn't offered as a course. This is just another time-consuming phase of that old registration.

. . . for classes. While the freshmen are still aghast that people can smoke in class and the upperclassmen are taking good advantage of the privilege, the learning begins. Books and Libraries never fails to amaze people. ("This looks like a crip course." "Oh, yeah. This is my third semester in it.") The smell of sulphur again wafts out from behind Chemistry building doors, and the Med students slave over huge books of small print and cadavers. A kaliedoscope of sound pours forth from the Music building as aspiring performers master the three B's. The past is relived at the rate of a couple of hundred years a week in History class, where it's reputed that if you drop your pencil, you may miss the entire Renaissance.

As the Campanile chimes two o'clock, the campus fills up with students going to and from class. Some say this is the best part about classes.

Imagine having military and chemistry on the same day. Maybe he's learning how to blow up the Company Commander's office.

A study of the heavens intrigues these astronomy students as the instructor explains the fine points of a telescope.

The Campanile Clock is a well-loved object. It faithfully chimes every hour to let the students out of class.

Libraries are for reading, studying and thinking. During exam week, they have another use—sleeping.

Just when people were beginning to think the contractors had gotten mixed up and were building the library underground, it miraculously started going up.

Students may find their classes meeting in the strangest places—from former hallways to reconverted restrooms. And the noise continues as the library goes up or, more correctly, down. (Then there's the story about the boy who used a carton of cigarettes to bribe a workman to drill outside his classroom window until the instructor was forced to dismiss class. Not at all insignificant in classwork are the dreaded exams. Four times a year, students go through the ritual of cramming—watching the sunrise over the edge of a Botany book, frantically deciphering notes taken when you were half asleep in the library. Then the Day. Then relief. Then the grades. College is not all work though. It's interspersed often with events such as . . .

Of course it's a class. You can't expect a dairy students to learn everything about a cow in the classroom.

This is where it all takes place—the gridiron battles, the colorful halftime shows and the frenzied cheering—Tiger stadium.

Many hours of practice on the part of the Tiger Band go into the presentation of the clever halftime shows.

. . . football games. An evening of football usually begins with the hustle and bustle of pre-game excitement. There's a touch of chill in the air, and gay chrysanthemums bloom on every feminine lapel. The towering stadium lights cast a glow over the multi-colored stands, swirling cheerleaders and stalwart purple and gold on the field. Despite several heart-breaking losses, spirits ran high. As the scores mounted, for better or worse, the band and cheerleaders led the crowd in cheering on their Tigers. Blood and sweat and determination were poured out on the field as the teams clashed. When halftime rolls around, a colorful show begins. The marching bands and majorettes of both schools contribute to the pageantry. An extra lift was provided the fans this year after their grief over the death of our beloved Mike. Looking terribly tiny in his huge cage, but roaring with all the true "Ole War Skule" spirit . . .

The audacity of our green and blue rival sometimes has to be erased—here under the supervision of several disgruntled LSU students.

These freshman boys at the first game seem undaunted by the humiliation of being seen in public in the required pajamas.

Coach Dietzel sends in a player during the Texas A&M game which opened the 1956 season.

Students push forward in the early morning sunshine to get a better look at the baby Mike II.

Coach Higginbotham evinces a spirited growl from the little Bengal during Mike II Day festivities.

. . . Mike II arrived. Purchased at the price of $2,500 from Audubon Park Zoo in the wicked city to the south, the little Bengal fills the role of mascot. A warm welcome was extended to the newcomer as classes were dismissed to let the students join the celebration. Very dashingly, Mike II arrived at three A.M. and had to wait until daylight to be greeted. Several students can testify to the all-night sitting stand. Come morning, though, the cheerleaders and crowds pressed forward to get a better look at the new mascot.

Even before Mike II arrived on the campus, much preparation went into making him comfortable, such as repairs on his cage.

And here he is! Our own Mike II giving a Tiger roar in the true Ole War Skule tradition.

The original Mike, after whom the Tiger mascot was named, addresses the crowds during welcoming ceremonies.

Pouring into cars, trucks or what-have-you, the students formed a parade with the little tiger in his cage at the head. Down Nicholson Drive and into town, the procession traveled. On Third Street it stopped for a pep rally. The cheerleaders performed right in the middle of the street as the students cheered and Mike II roared his Bengal approval. With the excitement running even throughout the shopping crowds who stopped to watch, everyone hopped back on board, and the parade wound its way back to campus. Understandably, Mike II fast wins his way into the hearts of everyone who meets him. Some of his most ardent admirers were introduced at . . .

Student Body President, Enos Parker, presents the purchasing check for the new Bengal mascot.

If you look very closely, you can distinguish the little ball of fur the cheerleaders are yelling about.

This is one of the many cars that made up the long parade in the little mascot's honor.

Shopping crowds on Third St. paused to cheer along with the LSU students for Mike II.

ATO's and their date crowd on one of the floats that joined the parade for the trek down Third St.

The LSU band keeps marching time for the parade which was led by the new arrival himself.

Even the Field House is deserted at this hour of the morning. Early birds get some eye-opening coffee to start work.

Somehow the boys generally manage to end up building the sorority decorations every year. How unselfish!

Deep concentration is required to draw even an alligator's eye straight.

A lonely girl and a lonely tiger keep each other company in the cold light of dawn on Homecoming Day.

. . . Homecoming. The day of return and reverie arrived as LSU met Florida in a gridiron battle. To members of the Greeks, Homecoming means late hours, strained muscles and aching fingers tired of twisting crepe paper. But the results are well worth it. The campus was alive with gay decorations depicting scenes of vast agony for the Gators and great triumph for the Tigers.

Fraternities brave the early morning hours too, for the decorations must go up and besides, they ran out of crepe paper the night before.

Homecoming crowds line the parade ground to watch the military display their marching skill.

The first item on the agenda for grads and students alike was the military parade. Cadets and their sponsors marched to the parade ground, displaying their skill for the onlookers. A number of other morning activities were scheduled for the alums, including a giant barbeque courtesy of the Block and Bridle Club. In the afternoon, LSU turned on the talent for the guests. The annual homecoming show "Tiger Fever" took place in the Gym. Carefully selected students blended their talent under the direction of Gene Quaw to make a wonderful, lively production.

Who could extend a more enticing welcome to the alums than these lovely co-eds.

These ten co-eds added their talents to make the Homecoming Show a smashing success.

This alumnus, at the Block and Bridle barbeque with his wife, graduated from LSU in 1895.

Quartets are popular these days, so naturally the Homecoming Show had one of the best on hand to entertain the alums.

Awards for the most outstanding Homecoming decorations are a high point in the evening for the winners.

As the afternoon wore on, the alums took a breather and recalled other Homecomings in other years on this campus. Some paid a visit to their former fraternity houses; some drifted back to old classrooms; some just relaxed a moment under the big oaks and looked back through the years. Their reverie was soon interrupted, though, for time was flying and the game began at 8:00. Back through the same gates they poured into the same stadium, students of yesterday and today. Many of the events that the alums recall on Homecoming have remained the same and probably always will. Among these are the many . . .

Pi Kappa Alpha created a waterfall to show just how far down the Florida Gators would fall.

The skilled LSU band forms a huge banner for entertainment of the Homecoming crowds at halftime.

Little Mike riding high indicates the way this frat hopes it will be.

Theta Kappa Phi created this massive and artistic decoration for 1956 Homecoming.

Work, work and more work for the Kappa's as they prepare their decoration.

Pi Beta Phi welcome the alums with a recollection of past Tiger victories.

Sigma Chi offered a really southern theme complete with wide-eyed Florida alligators.

The PiKA's extended this welcome on the Gator's visit to Tigerland.

Kappa Delta used a giant-sized adding machine to add up the score for Homecoming.

Presenting the winning sorority decoration—Kappa Kappa Gamma.

Delta Gamma made a pictorial display of the Gators downfall at 1956 Homecoming.

This young lady remembered which stone not to step on. Bet she passed all of her exams, too.

Being careful not to step on the seal of LSU in the Field House Lounge is a much-abused tradition.

. . . traditions. No college is complete without a host of traditions passed down through the years, and LSU is certainly not lacking. One of the most revered of these traditions concerns the large square in the pavement in the front of the Law Building. It is widely known that those who step on this square will without a doubt flunk their next exam. Students on their way to Tiger Town can be seen scrupulously avoiding this mistep. Another tradition dear to the hearts of all students is the kiss under the Campanile. Any boy walking through the passageway beneath the Tower is entitled to kiss the young lady he is escorting. It is said that no girl is a true co-ed until she has experienced this. Flanking the north door of the Gym are the two Civil War cannons which play a part in another famous tradition. Inside the main door of the Field House lies the beautiful seal of LSU. Despite the fact that students are supposed to pass around it, many unthinking feet trod it every day.

Which twin had the Toni? These four barbers seem determined to make sure no one ever finds out.

Once again the cannons fail to fire as two LSU co-eds pass by; people are beginning to wonder.

Whoever invented this tradition ought to get a medal for service above and beyond the call of duty.

All freshman boys can testify to another famous tradition. Immediately after their arrival at school, they are waylaid by upperclassmen and shorn of their hair. To the freshmen's great distaste, some of the would-be barbers experiment artistically with their topknots, creating some ludicrous haircuts. Another much-practiced tradition is that of mock initiations by several organizations. Students crossing the campus are highly entertained by the antics of the bearded G&M boys, the military maneuvers of the Pershing Rifles and the annual pumping process. Not in the category of traditions, yet of equal annual importance are . . .

An A.I.Ch.E. initiate pays the price of membership. Who can doubt the purity of water at the hands of this expert?

Oh, what is so low as an uninitiated member? This particular one seems to be in awe of the hierarchy.

"Did I say something wrong, sir?" Probably he didn't, but someone can always find a reason to harass a pledge.

This initiate seems to be giving an impromptu sidewalk show much to the amusement of a passer-by.

On the more practical side, the initiates keep the cannons in good shape. After all, you never can tell when those Yankees will come again.

Decisions . . . always decisions, as the LSU boys ponder over the pictures of the candidates for Darling.

Will Richardson looks a little undecided as upperclassmen cast their votes for class officers.

Strong military minds can be counted on to give an intelligent vote in the Junior Division elections.

. . . the elections. LSU is host to a number of varied elections, both governmental and honorary. The first of these during the year is the colorful Junior Division and class officer election. Occurring at about the same time as these elections is the voting for Homecoming Queen. Candidates put up by every male organization on campus are voted on by the football team and eliminated to three finalists. The entire student body votes on one of the three for queen, and the remaining two become maids in her court. Another important election which occurs on campus is the annual Darling contest. A panel of representatives from every male organization on campus picks twenty-five finalists, whose pictures are posted in the Field House. On that day, the lounge overflows with discerning males as they cluster around the pictures to weigh the attributes of each candidate and cast their vote. The winner is the Darling of LSU with the next six highest candidates forming her court. The seven beauties are kept a secret until the night of the Gumbo Ball when they are presented to the student body. The winners of the above-mentioned JD elections have another role besides holding office. Later on in the fall comes . . .

The lovely Homecoming Queen is accompanied by the two maids in her court.

A board of discerning judges carefully discuss and consider the candidates before electing finalists in the Darling contest.

It's hard for a man to decide how to vote with such effective persuasion being used at the JD polls.

Candidates and supporters gather around the banner-bedecked Gym Armory to canvass the voters.

Emblems of royalty are bestowed on the Freshman Day King and Queen at the crowning ceremony.

TV's most famous pianist performs for the freshmen at the talent show.

Elvis has nothing on these four winners in the quartet division of the talent show.

She's lovely and talented—as a matter of fact, the Most Talented Freshman Girl.

A number of things come under the heading of "talent," and a bit of the exotic always livens up the show.

This smiling couple takes a few moments out to cut a royal rug at the Freshman Day dance.

. . . Freshman Day—the day of jubilee for all the poor mistreated "dogs." Dismissed from class at noon, the freshmen prepare to take part in the festivities. These activities are designed not only to honor all the freshmen but especially to honor the court. The king of Freshman Day is the newly-elected president of the Junior Division, while his queen and court are composed of other officers, candidates and outstanding members of the freshman class. Traditionally, the frosh co-eds are met by the members of the military and marched to the parade grounds. However, a very soggy precipitation waylaid plans a little this year so that everyone just met in the Gym. With the crowning ceremony comes the very solemn moment of liberation after which the "dogs" are "dogs" no more. From here on out, the activities are planned for the entertainment of the royal court and their subjects. On the stage of the Gym Armory, a galaxy of freshman talent is presented ranging from quartets to comedy acts. The climax of the show is the presentation of the Most Talented Freshman Boy and Girl. Dancing to a dreamy orchestra, the freshmen meet and get acquainted. Come curfew time, the festivities end, and the freshman girls rush to slip in before the dorm door closes and the lock clicks. Tired and weary, happy to leave "dog days" behind, the freshmen end their special day. However, festivities never end at LSU, for not long afterward the campus greets . . .

... the Rodeo. Sponsored annually by the Block and Bridle Club, this event provides thrills and spills for the student body to watch. Preceding the actual performance, President Middleton declares Western Day, and all the wranglers dust off their boots and don their ten-gallon hats. A hoopin' and hollerin' parade advertises the rodeo to the students as the campus is overrun with cowboys, horses and clowns. That night the show begins beneath the huge dome of the Coliseum. Kicking up quite a bit of dust, the Block and Bridle members provide the crowds with a host of events including calf-roping, bareback riding, bronc riding and, of course, the clowns. With remarkable skill and aching vertebrae, the cowboys run through this series of breathtaking displays. Another highlight of the evening is the presentation of the lovely Rodeo Queen, in western dress no less.

Shortly after the rodeo completes its run, the Coliseum is again put into use. Basketball season begins as the Tiger cagers battle it out on the court, despite the apparent lack of interest from the students. Thrills of other kinds were provided by the students throughout the year as several other . . .

A rather lonely looking lion rests peacefully in the University lake after the annual theft of the SAE mascot.

The SAE's rescue their lions in fine style complete with raft, banners, and much horseplay.

. . . events of special interest occur. The campus is large and filled with energetic students who sometime stem their energies into dubious channels. Of major interest as a student project was the rather successful panty raid. Not quite as riotous as last year's uprising, it still managed to be pretty lively. Chanting and yelling, a group of approximately 500 boys congregated around the girl's dorms begging for souvenirs. Impossible as it sounds, it is said that one boy did actually get in a first floor window of West Hall and confiscated an entire drawer of unmentionables. Probably, though, this lone boy didn't cause nearly as much panic as the horde of policemen charging through the dorm. Another honored prank of LSU, almost a tradition in itself, is the annual theft of the SAE lions. This year an unnamed fraternity pledge class, being ordered to get the lions, did a very decisive job of it. The next morning a group of disgruntled SAE's arose to find their lions peacefully resting in the middle of the University lake.

The mobile news unit almost went out of circulation after this high-spirited attack during the panty raid.

Waving "souvenirs", the students grimace for the photographers.

Woe to the person who gets within this line of fire; there are many ways of relaxing from the ardor of school-work.

This fellow seems to have accumulated quite a horde of loot, and he doesn't look like he's going to let go of it.

Actress Terry Moore gave the crowds at the SAE house quite a thrill, although the gentleman on her left seems very nonchalant.

Nonsense, it doesn't hurt a bit. Well, uhh, not too much anyway.

On the more constructive and serious side, the students also participated in the Dollars for Hungary drive. Sponsored by the Student Council, the drive succeeded in collecting about two thousand dollars in cash and several thousand pounds of clothing for relief of the Hungarians. An annual student activity of much interest on campus is the naming of members of Mortar Board and ODK. Several outstanding students were recognized with this highest of all campus honors. Deserving students are also recognized in the naming of Who's Who. A great many other students were recognized, too—namely with a shot in the arm. In a campus-wide drive courtesy of the infirmary, LSU students were inoculated for Polio. Back to the lighter side of events on campus, the SAE's seem to have a stronghold on sensation this year, including a very sensational visitor. While in town plugging her latest picture, actress Terry Moore dined in style at the SAE house with plenty of good food and awestruck admirers. But it can't be said the SAE's have a stronghold on movie stars. In town for the premiere of "Drango," actor Jeff Chandler was honored at a banquet by Kappa Delta. The highlight of the luncheon was the naming of the star as honorary sweetheart of Epsilon of Kappa Delta. Not only awestruck, but also stagestruck are the admirers of . . .

Five smiling Kappa Delta's cluster around their honored guest, actor Jeff Chandler.

These are only three of many campaigners who got out and collected money for the Dollars for Hungary drive.

Emoting like this gives drama students good experience in the art of fine acting.

Relax friends. It's not a real murder, but the expert acting of these LSU students make it look very convincing.

... drama at LSU. The excellent speech department provides material for the outstanding student performances. The smell of greasepaint and dusty props, the glitter of footlights and the faint queasiness around the stomach region all blend to make the back-stage excitement prevalent at each performance. After each performance the greasepaint remains, as do the dusty props and glittering footlights. Perhaps there may be distinctly more than just queasiness around the stomach region. But added to it all is the warm welcome sound of applause flooding up from the audience. In this the performers find gratification. During the past year, innumerable plays have been given, among them "Liliom" and "The Triumph of the Egg". Usually under the direction of Miss Sharon Anthony, they were performed with skill and vividness to appreciative audiences. Equally as appreciative are the audiences of . . .

Makeup is an art in itself and a contributing factor to the success of LSU productions.

Hard work goes on backstage as these seamstresses create the costumes worn by the actors.

Gallantry on stage as three performers create a scene in one of the drama school's many excellent presentations.

. . . musical performances. Renowned for its school of music, LSU doesn't let its reputation down. The excitement before a performance is electric. The orchestra pit resounds as the violins and flutes and drums tune up. Music lovers arrive. The rustle of programs being handed out and people finding their seats fills the auditorium. As the lights dim, there is one last flurry of getting settled, and the curtain goes up. Audiences this year were treated to a wide variety of performances. Included were concerts and operas, solos, orchestrations and renditions by the A Cappella Choir. Performed with taste and talent, they were a credit to the artists and to LSU. Musical in nature but of a slightly different cast were the many . . .

The LSU orchestra spends many hours at practice and provides the students with many hours of musical pleasure.

Music and voices blend together to make the beautiful renditions of the A Cappella Choir.

Two students take part in a scene from the major production of the Music School, "Tales of Hoffmann."

The military's own Little Colonel whirls on the dance floor after her presentation to the guests.

. . . formal dances. With such a large student body and so many different organizations, LSU can boast a number of formals. Coming first this past year was the annual Military Ball at which the officers and their sponsors are presented. The Barrister's Ball was exclusively for law students and their dates. In mid-December came the beautiful Gumbo Ball. One of the gayest formals on campus is the annual Pan-American Fiesta. An all-campus dance, the event features a beautiful Pan-American Fiesta queen chosen from a number of candidates. The spring season brought the all-campus dance sponsored by the Student Council featuring Ralph Martere. Spring also brought the series of fraternity and sorority formals for their members, dates and guests. All in all, it can be said to have been a sparkling, dancing year. On the serious side but just as much a part of the student's life are the . . .

... students centers. In the belief that no existence is complete without the religious element, the various chapels and meeting places are provided. Several religions are represented on campus in the student centers—Episcopalian, Catholic, Methodist, Presbyterian, Lutheran and the Christian Scientists. Most of the chapels maintain organizations such as the Catholic Newman Club and the Methodist Wesley Foundation to bring the student closer to his church when he's far from home. The student centers have religious programs, recreational activities, parties and social work programs; they often participate in the intramural sports. One major project of all the centers combined is Religious Emphasis Week. Each year a main topic of particular interest to the students is chosen. Panels are organized, speakers obtained and the project goes into full swing. Speaking in dorms, in Greek meetings and in many other organizational meetings, the topic is presented to the students and discussed by and for them. Of the many other events for the students are the . . .

All of the student centers have well-stocked libraries which are open for student use and enjoyment.

. . . presentations of the Artists and Lecture series. Varied in substance, they cover a wide field of artistic endeavor. Cultural achievements are an integral part of the life of every conscientious college student. Through this Artist and Lecture Series, a number of artists were brought this year right to the stage of the Gym Armory, right to the LSU student body. Included in the repertoire were the beautiful Ballet of Paris, performed with true artistry, and the renowned lecturer Homer Dodge. Other presentations were the St. Louis Symphony and Anna Russell, the international comedienne. The stage of the Gym Armory again came into use when the annual Varsity Show was presented. Under the direction of Gene Quaw, the musical features the talents of members of the student body. The talents of the members of the student body are well employed in yet another way throughout the year—that ancient pastime of . . .

Another Artists and Lecture Series presentation was Homer Dodge, renowned lecturer.

International concert comedienne Anna Russell performed for the students.

Dr. Jose Chiriboga from South America lectured to the Law students during the past year.

The Artists and Lecture Series took great pride in presenting the St. Louis Symphony to the students this year.

"Eugene" Taylor

This shady spot by Allen Hall provides a perfect stopping place to pass along the latest gossip.

The Field House overflows with loungers who like to relax with a coke or coffee before trudging back to class.

... passing the time of day. No one can study and attend class all of the time, so various methods of rest and relaxation are employed by the LSU students. Perhaps the best known of all pastimes is just talking. Students gather at any spot on campus to gab—in the halls, on the library steps, in the dorms and in the Coffee Shop. Actually, talking may be considered an overall pastime that accompanies all the others. The Field House is a popular meeting place for students, particularly between classes. With the jukebox blaring and a mug of coffee in hand, they take a break before continuing the long day of exhausting study. Students can be seen at all times thumbing through the magazines right beneath the sign that expressly says not to do so. Could this be from the lack of newspapers to read? While relaxing in the Field House,

The main gripe of motorists on campus (aside from parking) is the flood of pedestrians who take their time crossing streets.

What's the matter, boys? Can't you read signs?

students usually pay a visit to the Post Office. Cursing silently at their empty boxes, they pause a moment to talk with other disappointed letter-seekers. After a rendezvous in the Field House, the students pour out on the campus again. Late motorists pause to let the migration cross the streets, the quadrangle fills up and the stag line in Allen Hall forms again.

The Post Office never loses its popularity. Sometimes college seems an awfully long way from home.

The stag line seems to be enjoying some private joke, while the boy at the left looks like he found an empty mailbox.

The University

The University is large and complex, sometimes a little baffling, sometimes a little annoying, and a wonderful experience all of the time. Since 1860, it has evolved into a system of professors and students, organizations and regulations. Seniors and undergraduates learn together. They belong to Greeks and honoraries and professional organizations. They belong to religious organizations for the fulfillment of their college life. The President, the Deans, and the professors and the ministers guide them through these years of scholastic and social endeavor. As a moulder of ideas and ideals, nothing surpasses it. As a birthplace for friendships, nothing surpasses it. This is the University.

Administration

Our administration at L.S.U., headed by Governor Long, the Board of Supervisors, and President Middleton, completely maintains the University as one of the foremost in the country. The tremendous task of obtaining operational funds is carried by the Louisiana State University Board of Supervisors, which is composed of sixteen members who are appointed by the governor for a term of fourteen years. The members represent citizens from all parts of the state and function as spokesmen for the University in the legislature. The governor, being an ex officio member of the Board, plays an important role in the administration of our University. Known to the students as the General, is our President, Lieutenant General Troy H. Middleton, L.S.U.'s thirteenth President, who has distinguished himself in so many ways as an educator and administrator. His service to our university, beginning in 1930, has consistently been progressive and eminent, with the promise of a continuance of achieving distinction and honor for himself and for L.S.U.

Governor Earl K. Long, ex officio member of the Louisiana State University Board of Supervisors.

Cangelosi, Vice-Chairman; Dean Charles E. Smith, Tom W. Dutton, Horace Wilkinson, Jr., Joseph C. LeSage, Jr., James E. Smitherman.

Charles E. Smith, Dean of the University, is the ranking administrator in all academic matters.

Life for the student at L.S.U. is very much affected by the Dean of the University, Dean of Administration, Dean of Women and Dean of Men. These four people are concerned with all phases of student activities. The Dean of University is responsible for the preparation of the catalogue, the university calendar and class schedules. He is the co-ordinator of work of the several colleges and schools of the University. He studies the needs of the educational divisions of the University and assists the President in apportioning funds of the University among the schools and colleges. The Dean of Administration claims the role of fiscal agent and business manager of the University. He assists in the preparation and control of the budget and maintains a perpetual inventory of all permanent property of the University, and sees to it that University property is insured. Every student, upon his arrival at L.S.U., becomes indoctrinated with all the rules and regulations set up by the Dean of Men and the Dean of Women, which govern the activities of the individual and organizations. These two deans seek to maintain order and discipline on the campus to insure smooth functioning of activities and social events on campus. They are especially concerned with the health and general welfare of the students, and frequently provide helpful understanding through individual counseling. They provide information and counseling in plans for carrying on extracurricular activities. Probably the most publicized function of the Dean of Women and Dean of Men is that of dealing with discipline cases. Actually, University discipline is administered jointly through administrative procedure and student government, with the Deans as Chairmen of the Faculty Committees on Discipline.

Daniel Borth, Dean of Administration, is the chief business officer of the University.

In the center of the romantic city of New Orleans among, or despite, all the frivolity, industry, and business, LSU's medical students pore over thick volumes of books until the wee hours of the morning. Each Monday at nine a whirlwind of activities engulfs the medics, taking them on a round of extensive classes, study, and frequent quizzes. They occasionally claim that the notes taken during one week in the Med school exceeds the quantity of those taken in undergraduate work. Of course they gripe about the amount of work required, but they objectively view the fact that there is a myriad of knowledge they must learn which will constantly serve them in the future. On weekends, the medics leave their antiseptic world briefly to take part in gala parties which are unrivalled by ordinary campus functions. Their annual splurge is the Cadaver Ball, which celebrates the successful completion of the first semester (for some) and the freshman's final farewell to their cadavers

A medical student shows proper technique in laryngoscopy procedure.

A machinist in the chemistry machine shop adjusts the lathe, a machine which facilitates shaping materials of wood or metal.

Physics lab student operates the oscilloscope, a device which makes the shape of a voltage or current wave visible on the screen.

Life for students in the College of Chemistry and Physics seems to consist of series of tests, which dominate the classroom and require numerous hours to be spent in labs. Particularly unpopular are the 2-5 labs on Friday afternoon, where students grudgingly carry out their experiments in the Coates laboratories. The hall floors of Nicholson and Coates are worn thin from the hundreds of feet that consistently point toward the coke-machine room in Coates, a vain attempt on the part of the lab participants to find relief from the reacting chemicals. But soon, the feet point in the opposite direction, head down the same halls, and lead the student back to his test tubes. Long before the end of the lab period, our chemist turns his thoughts to his plans for the carefree weekend, which is, above all, free from test tubes.

Law students take a break from their studies to enjoy the night air on the steps of the Law Building.

Seeming to hibernate throughout the year around the area of the Law Building, the law students make their annual debut at the Barristers' Ball, with intermittent appearances at LSU football games, armed with their traditional derbys and canes. Although they make it a point to enjoy themselves, they do have a serious side. In the classroom, instruction is designed to prepare the students for a variety of positions in the fields of public service or private practice. The curriculum is planned to equip the student with a thorough knowledge of the fundamental legal principles, as well as a broad understanding of their application in the society in which he lives. Instruction is offered in all important phases of the common and statute laws of the United States, as well as in related semiprofessional and nonlegal subjects. The aims of the students are varied, and the curriculum is designed to accommodate them. Outside of the classroom the aspiring lawyer can be found in the Law Library; chair tilted back, feet propped upon desk, book in hand. The future responsibility and solemnity of meditating barristers can be evidenced twice a year at the traditional Moot Courts, which afford the witnessing of court cases involving hypothetical witnesses and defendants.

The students in the College of Arts and Sciences may be found in almost any classroom on campus. Because the student in this college is required to take a wide variety of courses in natural sciences, social sciences, and humanities, he is usually faced with the dilemma of taking philosophy or math, not sure which is the worse fate. In the foreign language lab he tries to figure out if the little man on the tape is saying "visto" or "bisto," usually deciding to write the letter somewhere between a "v" and a "b." He blushes through all shades and tints while his speech class peers laugh at him; he goes faithfully to University chorus, hoping he doesn't wail again on the pauses of the "Messiah." He goes to zoology praying that he doesn't faint again when the "pickled" cat appears on the scene. But he always enjoys art history, because this class provides him with a naptime right after lunch. Through such a wide variety of courses,

Atkinson Hall is where the aspiring engineer spends most of his days at LSU. Of course, occasionally, one may see him with red and white pole and tripod measuring the area of the campus —or is it the girls' dormitories? The student of engineering also spends considerable time in the library studying calculus, his favorite course, which he regards as the price of becoming prepared to cope with the technological problems of the world. He becomes thoroughly acquainted with engineering equipment and techniques through numerous hours of laboratory work and demonstrations. He strives incessantly to assimilate the theories and techniques presented to him which will enable him to render service to the world in the engineering profession. As hard as the future engineer studies, he also works at enjoying himself on weekends. On top of the entertainment list of the engineer is the annual Engineers' Ball, held for the enjoyment of the entire campus. No calculus is needed here to see the extraordinary beauty and entertainment offered by this affair.

Agriculture

Meeting in no special building, students in the College of Agriculture are found in various corners of the campus. Although it seems inconceivable to some, girls who are home economics majors are included in this college. These girls in home economics usually have classes in Stubbs, whereas boys' classes are held in various agriculture buildings. Agriculture students are often required to spend considerable time in labs and doing practical duties. For students in dairying, this requirement takes form in his rising with the crow of the rooster (and sometimes even before) to milk the cows which furnish L.S.U. cafeterias with milk. Home economists and soil conservationists spend many hours learning chemical formulas to enable them to better work with their respective jobs. However hard he may work, the student has an intense desire to slough off all these various duties and academic worries when the excitement of the Ag Jamboree fills the air. At this annual event, the classroom is far away from the student's mind—only to be brought back again to keen focus during the Ag Convocation, where the outstanding students are rewarded for their achievements.

During the first graduate year, students in the School of Social Welfare divide their time between classes held on the ground floor of the Law Building and their field work placement in either the local Department of Public Welfare or the Family Court. The new social welfare student learns to plan his time to provide for all academic requirements. After receiving the Certificate of Social Work for his first year's work, he may decide to continue graduate work for the Master of Social Welfare, in which he can specialize in one of several areas of social work. If his specialization is medical social work, he especially finds interesting the courses taught by ten visiting physicians and psychiatrists from L.S.U. School of Medicine. During this second year the field work changes character considerably. The social welfare student is now in a block placement, usually in a hospital or social welfare agency in nearby locations. Now the student commutes, staying at the agency for four days of the week and resuming classes the remaining two days.

Students in the College of Education spend hours cutting pictures out of magazines and reading children's books. They take science and mathematics courses keyed to the child's aptitude and learn techniques of fashioning paper mache into fascinating animals and fairy tale characters; and then, in the senior year, practice teaching. All this, viewed from the eyes of the roommate, who is struggling with chemical formulas, has contributed to the misguided view of Ed School as being all play and no work. Actually, much time is required to master the theories and practical aspects of psychology, speech, and education preparatory courses. The future teachers know the necessity of techniques of quick thinking to enable them to meet the problems of working with children spontaneously, without losing their respect. They objectively realize that the education of future generations is in the hands of the education student today, and the quality of tomorrow's world depends upon their ability as educators of the younger generation.

Students in the College of Commerce can be found within the walls of Himes Hall, racing to make an eight o'clock class. It's always easy to let things fall behind schedule and easier yet for commerce students, who, toward the end of the semester, scurry to finish that budget they put off until the last minute, or to finish the long overdue accounting project. They are kept busy throughout the year with accounting and economics, which require hours of study time and usually end with the result of ten nail-bitten fingers. Annually, the Commerce Convocation is held to acknowledge the achievements of the students of this college, which make the painfully spent study hours seem to diminish. After struggling through numerous courses in mathematics, accounting, and business administration, the student emerges, anxious to enter the world of business, to test his academically learned skills, to serve society in a very practical, business like manner.

Research

Although seeming never to have classes, the graduate student is kept quite busy with various research programs. Because the graduate student is logically the person that will assume a large proportion of responsibility in our society, he is thoroughly trained in the methods and processes of research, which greatly determines the progress and direction of civilization. He spends most of his time gathering technical items of information and running experiments or tests for his thesis or dissertation. Thus, he can usually be found surrounded by thick volumes in the library, but he does attend a limited number of classes a week, which he usually regards as only a University requirement, his research being his main interest. About a month before the project is due, we can find our graduate student intensifying his program of work, breathing a sigh of relief when he completes it before the deadline. Thus, with his research complete, a scholastic average of B and his comprehensive examination over, he enters society, armed with a graduate degree, ready to serve his community on a professional level.

Music

To the music student, the Music and Dramatic Arts Building is his home, in spite of the rumor that he lives in a dormitory. Far into the night, he patiently perfects his musical gifts, only taking a break to run to Louie's for a snack. He participates frequently in band, choir, orchestra, and opera activities. Despite the necessary dedication of music students, they look objectively toward their future. Those in education know their position is secure; those in other divisions are not so sure. Although they cast worried glances toward their future, their love for music drives them forward to their objective.

All students majoring in music are required to demonstrate at least a moderate degree of proficiency in piano.

Junior Division

How large the campus seems to the arriving freshman—so many buildings and people! But even after the lines, crowds, and red tape of registration, he isn't shaken. He regards the walks (hikes?) to class as a necessary exercise. When healthy blisters rear their ugly heads, he wishes the campus architect had considered the people who always lived near school. As time goes by, he begins to wonder why he has to take math and history; why he has to come in early; why he can't cut class more often. . . . At this stage, it is evident that our freshman is developing into a sophomore.

Nursing

To fill the great need for nurses, the University curriculum has been expanded to include two new programs of study: a four-year Basic Nursing Curriculum for high school graduates and a General Nursing Curriculum. Students in the Basic Curriculum enter into the Junior Division. During Orientation Week pre-nursing school tests are given. Freshman students who show fitness for a nursing career are selected for admission to the Department of Nursing. Student nurses spend four semesters on the University campus. The remaining sessions are spent in New Orleans with classes at the School of Medicine and with clinical practice in various hospitals. University College classes are also attended by regular daytime students who cannot fit in a particular class during the day.

University College

The student body of University College is comprised of people employed during the day who are working toward a certificate or a bachelor's degree, and individuals in the professions, in business, who attend class to satisfy avocational interests.

In 1951, University College was established to enable students to secure a college education while carrying the responsibilities of employment or home management. Because these students are occupied during the day, classes are held in late afternoon, evening, and Saturday. The most popular class hour is 7 P.M. Then all parking lots and curb spaces fill within minutes, and numerous people hurry toward the already lit buildings. Once inside, the students settle down for a three hour lecture. At ten o'clock the same people who three hours earlier hurried in, now hurry out, and within a few minutes all parking lots and curbs are again the dream of the frustrated student who owns a car.

Students pause on the steps of the campanile on their way to evening classes.

Professional Schools

GRADUATES & UNDERGRADUATES

For those students who wish to go even further with their education than the normal amount of college work, the professional schools provide an opportunity for higher and more specialized learning. Medical students venture to the LSU Med School in New Orleans to study with the supervision and facilities offered by Charity Hospital. The Law School prepares its students for the practice of that honored profession and especially for Louisiana Law. Hundreds of students enter the Graduate school every year to become more proficient in their particular fields. These are only a few of the several Professional Schools maintained at LSU.

Seniors

The most exciting and meaningful moment in a student's life is the moment when he takes his diploma in hand and emerges from commencement with a degree and the ability to face the world confident in his knowledge of his chosen field. For four years, the university has given him every possible benefit in its power toward the achievement of this moment. His instructors have opened up their stores of knowledge for him to use as he wished. And he has absorbed these benefits, this knowledge. He may be the engineer who will help span space, or he may be the professor who will teach the next generation to span space. But doctor, lawyer or Indian chief, he may be counted on to have at his fingertips a vast amount of knowledge of his profession.

Undergraduates

Whether a student is a freshman, sophomore or junior, he has yet to achieve that degree of learning that entitles him to a diploma. He is still in the maturing process, scholastically and socially. One, two, or three years may yet lie ahead, but he is confident of being on the right track. The resources of the University will tutor and groom him for a life of leadership and contribution in whatever community he might make his home, in whatever field he might make his profession. He still has many exams to pass, many parties to attend, many people to meet. But time flies for the undergraduate.

Features

Features are an integral part of the ever-moving stream of University life. They are symbols, whether animate or inanimate, of student interests and pursuits. The statues and buildings, as the DeSoto monument, reflect the past. Feature activities, as publications, beauties, ROTC, and Who's Who, reflect the present with eyes toward the future. They influence every student with whom they come in contact, and in turn are influenced by every student who takes part in them. When the outside world looks into the World of the University, it sees first the features, because they represent a cross section of student life and attitudes. Faces come and go, and past leaders are forgotten as new students take over their responsibilities. In this feature section we have stopped for a time the stream of University life to present in words and in pictures, for generations to come, the story of what and who was LSU in 1957.

1957 Gumbo

In the middle of the summer Editor Judith Conrad and Associate Editor Jim Hanchey went to Nashville to begin plans for this year's GUMBO. They drew up tentative dummy layouts and prepared their schedule for the coming year. From the first general staff meeting in September until the last picture and piece of copy was sent back to the Benson Publishing Company after proofreading, the whole staff worked like Trojans. Ann Gueymard was Junior Editor in charge of the opening section. She had to find pictures that would give an over-all view of university life. The Beauty section was presided over by Cecilia Marks. Besides writing copy and gathering up photographs, she had to make sure that the Darling elections were run according to Hoyle. Mr. Gene Quaw assisted her in the planning and presentation of this year's Darling at the annual Gumbo Ball. Jake Fly and Jim Hanchey worked together on the Sports Section. We give a whole-hearted "Thanks" to Ace Higgins and Frank Morel of the Sports Publicity office for their invaluable assistance and cooperation. Without their help we would have been sunk.

All campus publications were the responsibility of Junior Editor Anne Byrnes. She was also in charge of Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities. Anyone who thinks our busy LSU Who's Who students are easy to contact should try scheduling their pictures! Ann Gill was in charge of all professional organizations on campus. The honoraries were taken care of by Merrill Wright. Janet White had the responsibility of the military section as well as the religious groups on campus. In charge of the university section was June Tuma. All efforts of the Junior Editors were synchronized by the able leadership of Judy Conrad and Jim Hanchey.

Gumbo Staff

Many hours of hard work were spent in the little office on top of the "L" building. Mr. Wiggins, our financial advisor, had his office conveniently located downstairs. Many were the trips we made up and down those stairs seeking his advice on all the things we didn't know. Two of our freshman staff members, Nolia Dupuy and Marion Bowman, contracted eyestrain from character counting. Another helper was Kathryn Geiger. Suzanne Russell, former Texas high school typing champion, was irreplaceable. A stack of papers representing a week's work would come out of her hands in a matter of hours. A representative from the publishing company came down to help finish up some of the last details. After all pictures were made, all copy written and mailed, we had only to sit back and—not relax, but re-read and correct type. Our picnic together when the book was finished climaxed a year of laborious work and exhilarating laughter, a year we wouldn't exchange for anything.

GUMBO Photographers Larry O'Brien and Walt Carney examine some of their newest prints.

Reveille

The Daily Reveille is a student newspaper, published four afternoons a week, Tuesday through Monday, and edited by students for student readers. Many specific problems must be met before its 55 issues a semester can be turned out.

The Reveille often works in co-operation with the Baton Rouge papers, the Department of Public Relations, and the athletic publicity office to prevent duplication. The working hours of the staff must be scheduled around the full scholastic load staff members are required to carry. Their hours must then be adapted to the hours of the full-time mechanical staff which operates in the backshop of the "L" building.

Cartoonist Peter Houck

The actual work of news-gathering begins in the editorial office in Alumni Hall. Most of the reporters and photographers receive some class credit for their work. Even before reporters are assigned, the advertising staff has been at work selling ads. These ads are drawn in on the dummies which upon completion are turned over to the editorial staff. After a reporter turns his copy in, it is edited by a paid staff member and placed on the dummy along with pictures and headlines. The process of "making up" and headline writing are usually completed by midnight and the materials are taken to the backshop.

The next morning the backshop crew sets the copy into type. The type is inked and a printed image is reproduced. This image is given to the proofreader who corrects typographical, grammatical, and spelling errors. While the type is being set, cuts of the pictures are made by the engraving department. The metal type and engravings are placed in metal frames, with each story and picture placed as it was drawn in on the dummy. A final page proof is taken, corrections are made by a news editor, and The Daily Reveille is ready for press.

Law Review

The Louisiana Law Review this year begins its seventeenth annual volume. Thousands of pages of print have been filled with well-chosen words issuing from the pens of law students from the Louisiana State University Law School. The Law Review also contains the articles of legal scholars from a far wider base. Such significant problems as the Right of Drip and Drain and Party Walls in Louisiana have been definitely settled. Some contribution has been made to other legal problems as well. This year's publication with its mighty words of wisdom will join its predecessors in becoming part of our LSU Law Library.

The usual number of new writers have been allowed to join the Review; the usual number of old ones have graduated. All have eagerly accepted their change of status and have begun working at their new responsibilities, whether it be slaving away in school and editor's office or setting up a law practice somewhere in our state.

Delta

Delta, Louisiana State University's only student literary magazine, is published annually under the direction of the department of English. It is not a publication of the English department, nor is it the official publication of the college of Arts and Sciences. As a positive purpose, Delta strives to be a representative publication, including all contributions of prose, poetry, and art from a student, regardless of his major. It has as its negative purpose NOT to become the magazine of the English majors nor to be run by a literary cliché. Several of the Delta short stories written by LSU students have appeared in national magazines.

This is the eleventh year of Delta's publication. Jeanne Garvey and her staff, under the faculty advisor, Dr. John Wildman, have once again carried out the purposes of the magazine. The excellent result of their work can be seen in this year's edition.

Sitting, Harold Warren, Louis Faxon. Standing: Robert Johnson, William Mattox, Oran Ritter, James Fitch.

L. S. U. Engineer

The LSU Engineer comes off the press five times a year and is published, edited and read by students in the College of Engineering. It contains many articles of interest ranging from a detailed history of the slide rule and the near-realized possibilities of an earth satellite all the way to a cross-sectional analysis of women. Career possibilities with different companies are illustrated by various advertisements and articles. Some regular features include "Meet the Faculty," a section which lets students see a more personal side of their teachers' lives; and "Miscues," the section of jokes which most people read first. This year's editor, Oran Ritter, and his efficient staff have done a good job of carrying out the purpose for which the Engineer was founded—to uphold and foster the deep respect that the engineering profession has earned through its services to the world.

Annual Ring

The Annual Ring, official yearbook of the School of Forestry, was first put into print at Louisiana State University in 1938. This year's editor, James Barnett, and his staff have been working like Paul Bunyans to make this year's Annual Ring the best yet. Classes and forestry organizations are pictured, as is the outstanding sophomores. Two special sections, Alumni News and the Alumni Directory, keep former students in touch with each other. From the dedication page to the last advertisement, the Annual Ring presents the activities of the forestry students—hectic lab sessions, summer camps, field days, and other social activities—so that it will show in words and pictures just how much fun was had this year, remind alumni of the fun of other years, and suggest to those following what they are in for.

Tiger-Rag

Doyle Cochran, Assistant Editor; Fred Kittler, Editor.

The official publication of the School of Medicine, Tiger Rag, goes to press every three weeks, culminating in a twenty-eight page humor magazine. With a circulation of over a thousand copies per issue it is distributed to the entire faculty and student body and mailed to all interning graduation. Editor Kittler, Assistant Editor Cochran and a competent staff plan, write, edit, assemble, proof, and distribute the paper. Contributions from the students may, in some instances, form the major part of the copy.

Alphone Landry, Charles Borne and James Freeman, Cartoonists, confer on an old issue.

Jerry Patton, Sports Editor, seems to be thinking up some new scheme.

Mr. T. K. McKnight, Executive Secretary, Alumni Federation.

Alumni News

The Alumni News is one publication that students at Louisiana State University know little about. They don't begin to appreciate its value until they have been out of school several years. The diploma fee includes a three-year subscription for all graduates. Former students who are not graduates are also eligible to join the Alumni Federation. This year one publication gave complete coverage when Louisiana State University's one-millionth student registered. The arrival of Mike II was portrayed as well as final pictures of our old mascot. One interesting regular section is a photographic page of all future tigers and co-eds. For years after our GUMBO is being used as a doorstep, Alumni News will be keeping all former Tigers in touch with each other and up-to-date on the latest happenings at LSU.

Mrs. Louise D. Wiggins, Editor, L.S.U. Alumni News.

Bill Barineau: Former President, Tau Beta Pi; Pi Epsilon Pi.

Edwin L. Blewer, Omicron Delta Kappa; Law Review Staff.

Marilyn Ruth Bordelon: President, College of Education; Mortar Board.

Matthew Burns: President, "L" Club; Scabbard and Blade.

Who's Who In American Colleges And Universities

Marvin Caplan: Former President, Interfraternity Council, Student Council.

Wayne T. Davis: Pi Mu Epsilon, Tau Beta Pi; Scabbard and Blade.

Selection of nominees to be recognized by Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities is conducted by a campus committee which includes representatives of the faculty, students, and administration. To be considered are the students' scholarship, participation and leadership in academic and extracurricular activities, citizenship and service, and promise of future usefulness. After nomination the student must then be accepted by the organization.

Who's Who In American Colleges and Universities was first published for the school year of 1934-35 and now includes juniors, seniors, and graduate students from 650 institutions. A certificate of recognition is presented to the student before or upon graduation. The nationwide honor organization maintains a reference or placement service which is free of cost to the student. This year, thirty-four outstanding LSU students from undergraduate colleges, Law School, and Medical School received this recognition of their services.

John Firestone: President, Phi Beta Pi; Alpha Omega Alpha.

Philip Hablutzel: Omicron Delta Kappa; President, Phi Gamma Delta.

Thomas Hardeman: President, Phi Delta Phi; Associate Editor, Law Review.

Lynn LeBlanc: Former President, Sigma Chi; Cadet Colonel.

Patricia Loughran: Co-ed Vice-President; Secretary, AWS Advisory Board.

Barbara Luft: Mortar Board; Chairman, Committee of 100.

Agnes Mary McAlpin: Editor of Reveille, first semester.

Sherry Kay McDowell: Mortar Board; President, Kappa Kappa Gamma.

Carolyn Richard McPherson: President, Panhellenic Council.

Edith Maier: Vice-President, Mortar Board; Chairman, Judicial Board.

Berneita Main: Treasurer, Mortar Board; President, Sigma Alpha Iota.

Billie Ann Yawn: President, Mortar Board; Senior Member, Honor Council.

Eight of the nominees pose before the critical eyes of the judges, while the others nervously await their turns outside.

Gumbo Beauty Ball

Acting as mistress of ceremonies, Cecilia Marks introduces the finalists to the audience.

After the nominations for Darling of LSU were received, the feverish campaigning started. The day for the selection of finalists arrived, and each contestant with a self-conscious smile walked the length of the long reception room before the admiring eyes of two hundred men judges. Finally it was voting day, and then only the votes remained to be counted into the wee hours of the morning. The identities of the Darling and her court became a well-guarded secret.

At the ball, there was the soft blue of winter moonlight shining through a Christmas tree; six "Christmas Jewels," alive and very much aglow; a breathless hush, a stir of excitement, and magically—a Darling was revealed.

Spectators gather for the presentation of the finalists.

Ike and Adlai take note: this is one sure way to get an enthusiastic turnout on election day.

A brand new Darling smiles radiantly for her audience.

Santa Claus, better known in some circles as Ed Sturdivant, coyly reveals the contents of his pack.

Setting for the presentation was a pavillion of jewels, complete with a chandelier and Christmas tree.

Military

C/Capt. Alfred Abdalla, Pat Brown, sponsor.

The history of LSU is, in part, a history of its military department. Founded as a State Seminary of Learning and Military Academy, the university required that even the professors be of military rank. A succession of military men have headed the University from Colonel William Tecumseh Sherman, of Civil War infamy, in 1860 to General Troy H. Middleton in 1957. The ROTC program, established in 1916, has turned out hundreds of officers for the United States Military forces. This program has proved to be of great service and has added much prestige to Louisiana State University.

The Colonels Jim and Irene in the spotlight.

Military Ball

Every year when the December winds begin to sweep their frigid blasts across the drill field, the LSU Corps of Cadets really has a Ball—a Military Ball. The Cadet officers, decked out in their finest uniform and spotless white gloves, and the basic cadets, clothed in their Fall-Winter-Spring-Summer khakis, this year squired a bevy of beautiful belles to dance away the evening within the confines of a brilliantly decorated Gym-Armory. Music was furnished for the dance by the Les Elgart orchestra. The highlight of the dance was the presentation of the Army and Air Force cadet corps sponsors whose commander-in-chief this year was Miss Irene Charleton. As one of the most important functions on the campus social calendar, the Military Ball is an eagerly awaited event. All who attended complimented the planning committee on really having quite a Ball!

Reserve Officers Training Corps

Commandant of Cadets and Professor of Air Science, Colonel Herbert O. Wangeman assumed this duty in September 1956. Col. Wangeman was previously stationed at Turner Air Force Base, Georgia. Prior to his coming to LSU he was an Executive Officer and Director of Personnel of the Fortieth Air Division. He is a graduate of Occidental College, California. Col. Wangeman entered the Air Force in 1935 and served two tours of duty in England during World War II, first as a Squadron Commander and later as Group Commander. Since World War II he has served a tour of duty in Alaska and served on temporary duty basis in England and French Morocco.

His many decorations include the Silver Star Medal, Distinguished Flying Cross, Air Medal with Three Oak Leaf Clusters, American Defense Service medal, European-African-Middle Eastern Campaign medal with battle star, American Campaign medal, World War II Victory medal, National Defense Service medal, and the Distinguished Unit Citation.

Colonel Frederick B. Alexander, Jr., Professor of Military Science and Tactics, has had a long and distinguished career with the Army. As tangible evidence he wears many decorations for valor and service, among them the Legion of Merit, Bronze Star with Oak Leaf Cluster, Air Medal, Commendation Ribbon, Korea Ulchi with gold star, Korean Presidential Unit Citation with two clusters and the Distinguished Unit Citation with palm.

Following his graduation from Princeton University with a Bachelor of Arts degree, Col. Alexander enlisted in the United States Army as a private in 1940. He attended the Field Artillery Officer Candidate Class Number 1 at Fort Sill, Oklahoma, in 1941, and was commissioned as 2nd Lt. of Artillery upon graduation therefrom. He commanded the United Nations Partisan Forces in Korea and the famous 21st Infantry Regimental Combat Team which carried out the repatriation of 72,000 Oriental prisoners of war from the Island of Koji-Do in Korea. Colonel Alexander comes to LSU from Fort Gordon, Georgia.

L. S. U. Cadet Corps

The Cadet Corps is the largest single organization on the L.S.U. campus, being composed of over 2,500 eager cadets. The R.O.T.C. program is designed to produce efficient well-trained reserve officers, ready for active duty in the various phases of the Army and Air Force. Many advantages are available to the R.O.T.C. cadet. For example, each advanced cadet receives an expense paid vacation to an area which he would otherwise probably not have the opportunity to visit. This is endearingly referred to by those fortunate enough to attend as "summer camp." The Cadet Corps also sponsors an annual Military Ball, obtaining a nationally known band for its members to enjoy. This year's selection produced Les Elgart, whose aggregation pleased a packed gym-armory.

Pershing Rifles

Pershing Rifles was founded in 1894, in Lincoln, Nebraska, by General of the Armies John J. Pershing in order to foster a spirit of friendship and cooperation among men in the military department and to maintain a highly efficient drill company. It aims to further and preserve the highest ideals of the military profession.

Company D-4, the LSU unit was established here in 1940. Members are basic ROTC cadets who have achieved a "C" over all average, a "B" average in military and who have shown a high degree of proficiency in military drill.

During the year Company D-4 participates in many outstanding activities. For the past four years the LSU Company has won first place at the Pershing Rifle Regimental Competition.

Sponsor's Club

A ROTC Sponsors Club was organized this year under the direction of Irene Charlton. Meetings are held every Thursday at one o'clock.

The purpose of the club is to make the sponsors take an active part in the military, and to help at all military functions of the university.

This year the sponsors received new regulation W.A.F. uniform. They are silver tan with green and blue scarves for the Army and Air Force respectively.

The Sponsors carried on several important activities during the past year—two of which were addressing invitations for the Military Ball and having an informal party for the officers wives.

Athletics

Louisiana State's athletic program, under the guidance of Athletic Director Jim Corbett, is designed to present top-flight sports entertainment to the students, faculty, and friends of the University. Its natural by-products are national and international publicity for the University, educational opportunities for hundreds of young men through athletic scholarships, and friendly competition with other universities. The University fields intercollegiate teams in four major sports—football, basketball, baseball, and track—and in the two prevalent minor sports—tennis and golf. LSU is a charter member of the Southeastern Conference, and its athletic teams have been leaders in all these sports during the past two decades. The athletic department's immediate aim is a well-balanced program which will enable LSU to field representative teams in the six sports, all the while maintaining the proper place of athletics in the general accomplishments of the University.

L. S. U. Coaching Staff

Being a good football coach is a large order for any man. Such a man must eat, sleep, and think football every day of the year, yet be able to carry on a conversation with a botany professor at a moment's notice. He must blend a knowledge of football's intricacies with the analysis of a psychologist. To nearly a hundred young men in the most impressionable stage of their lives, he must be leader, teacher, disciplinarian, and foster father. Added to this, he must be an entertaining speaker and a super salesman. Paul Dietzel, a handsome blond with a captivating smile, driving energy, and contagious enthusiasm, has filled that order for Louisiana State University. During his two years as football coach at the Ole War Skule, he has produced hard-hitting, hustling football teams and has travelled throughout Louisiana making friends for LSU, while laying a foundation for championship teams in future years.

If you attempted to chart Louisiana State's 1956 football performances, you would end up with something like a profile of a fat man sleeping on a cheap mattress—high on both ends but sagging pretty low in the middle. The Tigers, a blend of ex-redshirts, untested sophomores, and unknown junior college transfers, took their licks in 1956. They started off with a bang by almost derailing Texas A & M's championship express, but then went through four more bitter Saturdays before winning one. Yet in the end, through hustle and a never sagging spirit, they were good enough to win the two big ones that really counted—Arkansas and those touted Tulane Greenies. The strong point of 1956 was the line, and the stars of 1956 were linemen—guards Don Scully, the captain, and Bob Ziegler, the most valuable player. Scully and Ziegler, along with tackles Enos Parker and Earl Leggett, center Durk Graham and center-guard Ted Paris, formed LSU's rock-ribbed senior line from tackle to tackle. The backfield, riddled by graduation in the Spring, hurt Paul Dietzel's Tigers in the early season games. Late season development of junior college transfer Jimmy Taylor and the stellar debut of sophomore J. W. Brodnax finally gave LSU a running game. Three boys—Win Turner, M.C. Reynolds and Matt Burns—alternated at the quarterback spot for the 1956 Tigers. Gritty little Joe May, the only backfield veteran, recovered from injuries at mid-season and did a good job at left half. Three top ends, Billy Sheehy, Bill Smith, and John Wood, were hobbled with injuries, leaving most of the load to sophomore Red Hendrix. Wood came back at mid-season and starred in the win over Arkansas. Top individual honor went to 200-pound fullback Taylor who scored more points than any LSU footballer since the fabulous Steve Van Buren and who led the SEC as scoring champion.

The ball was about the only thing that wasn't in this portrait of Texas A & M's 9-6 win over the fighting Tigers.

L. S. U. 6 Texas A & M 9

Probably no other LSU football season ever had as auspicious a debut as did the season of 1956. The opponent was Texas A & M, rated as one of the nation's best football teams in all pre-season polls and destined to roll through an undefeated season. A crowd of over 60,000, the largest in LSU history, turned out for the opener and saw as good a football game as you could ask for. Texas A & M scored first in the opening quarter on a 14 yard running pass from halfback Bobby Conrad to halfback Carlos Esquivel. After a 7-0 intermission, A & M picked up two more points in the third period when the Aggie line blocked Olin Renfro's punt. LSU's hard-knocking wore down the Aggie stalwarts in the fourth quarter and the Tigers began to roll. LSU drove 84 yards for a touchdown, with Brodnax crashing over from the 10. On the ensuing kickoff, Billy Sheehy tried an on-sides kick and recovered for LSU. The Tigers were on the Aggie 24 and driving hard for the goal when the clock ran out. Brodnax was the game's best runner with 58 yards on 12 carries.

Paul Dietzel's inexperienced sophomores and junior college transfers caught up with him the second time out and Rice smashed long-time rival LSU by a 23-14 count in Houston. Rice's Frank Ryan pinpointed passes through LSU's leak defense and ran magnificently to hand the Bayou Bengals their second straight defeat. Rice scored on the first offensive push of the game on a 51 yard touchdown pass from Ryan to end Buddy Dial. LSU tied it up at 7-7 early in the second quarter by driving 52 yards on eight plays for the touchdown. A pass from Win Turner to Matt Burns accounted for the touchdown. Ryan gave Rice a 13-7 half-time edge on a 32-yard sprint and the Owls added insurance points on an 18 yard field goal by King Hill in the third period. Rice's Howard Hoelscher wrapped it up by sprinting 55 yards early in the fourth period for a 23-7 bulge. LSU came roaring back again in the last quarter and scored one touchdown set up by Brodnax's 52 yard run behind fine blocking. Time ran out before the Bengal powerhouse could overtake the Owls.

Maintaining a good average takes up an important part of every player's time.

Georgia Tech 39

A pass interception near the end of the first half broke the backs of LSU's "Fighting Tigers" and top-ranked Georgia Tech went on from there to pile up a 39-7 victory. The interception and a 67 runback for a touchdown gave Tech a 20-7 halftime lead that took all the fight out of the upset-minded Bayou Bengals. Until that point, LSU had fought Bobby Dodd's Engineers to a standstill. Tech drove for the first touchdown in the opening minutes with fullback Ken Owen going over from the 2. LSU tied it up on M. C. Reynolds' passes to Ronnie Johnston and a one-yard buck by Jimmy Taylor. After Tech moved out in front 13-7 on a 30 yard scoring aerial from Toppy Vann to Stan Flowers, LSU roared back on Reynolds' passing to the Teach 30. At that point, Reynolds, back to pass, was hit as he threw and the ball fell into the arms of Tech fullback Dick Gookin who raced 67 yards for the tally. In the second half, Tech pulled steadily away on another of Vann's touchdown passes and on runs by Vann and Gookin.

Taylor cracks over from the 1 yard line for LSU's only touchdown against the Tech Yellow Jackets.

Almost a touchdown for Kentucky, but LSU's Ted Paris (52) makes the stop of an end sweep inches away from the goal line.

Kentucky 14

The Pershing Rifles perform a precision drill routine.

The Kentucky, LSU game in Lexington was billed as the battle of the forward walls and it lived up to the advance notice. Kentucky's big line, sparked by All-American Lou Michaels, outbutted LSU's rugged forwards in a game that was all defense. Neither team was able to move much against the other's line, but Kentucky converted two opportunities into a 14-0 victory. LSU never got its offense going and gained only 177 yards all night. Kentucky drove 54 yards in the waning minutes of the first half for the first touchdown with halfback Woody Herzog going over from the 3. The Wildcats clung to the 7-0 lead throughout the second half and then drove 60 yards in the final four minutes for the second touchdown. LSU made only one tough offensive bid by driving to the Wildcat 11 in the fourth period. A penalty and an incomplete pass ended the drive and LSU's victory hopes.

Ole Miss beat down LSU in the second half for a 46-17 win in their annual battle at Baton Rouge, but the game was a good one for the Tigers. It marked the arrival of Jimmy Taylor, the 200 pound fullback who went on from there to become the SEC's hottest player and to lead LSU to the victory circle in three of its last four games. Big, bruising Taylor gained 61 yards in 15 carries, scored all of LSU's points and kicked a field goal that gave LSU a 17-14 halftime advantage. Ole Miss roared back for two touchdowns in the second half and then took the game away from the battered Tigers. Ole Miss took a 7-0 lead on a 29 yard scoring pass from Ray Brown to Eddie Crawford, but LSU tied it at 7-all on an Ole Miss fumble and Taylor's line buck. Minutes later, Ed Cassidy recovered another Rebel bobble and Taylor kicked a 17 yard field goal to put LSU ahead for the first time during the season. Ole Miss took back the lead with shocking suddenness on a 71 yard touchdown play from John Blalack to Leroy Reed. Then LSU drove 68 yards in a race against the clock to score in the final seconds for a 17-14 halftime lead. Early in the second half, Ole Miss turned an interception and a 19 yard pass from Brown to Crawford into a 20-14 lead. Then the Rebels drove 55 yards for another touchdown and sewed up the game.

Oklahoma A & M 0

The long victory drought ended as LSU's rebounding Tigers smashed a good Oklahoma A & M team 13-0 for the first victory of the season. LSU, rated a touchdown favorite before the game, found an offensive sparked by Jimmy Taylor who helped the Tigers to dominate the game. Taylor scored one touchdown and romped for 104 yards in 12 carries, the best offensive show by a Tiger back in more than a year, to lead LSU to victory. M. C. Reynolds connected on 7 of 11 passes for 94 yards to help the Tigers to victory. LSU scored the second time it got the ball, driving 54 yards after a recovered fumble. Taylor pounded over from seven yards out and then booted the extra point for a 7-0 advantage. The Bayou Bengals made their second touchdown minutes later after a 57 yard drive. After this touchdown, it was a bruising defensive battle with both LSU and the Aggies missing out on scoring chances. Oklahoma A&M, playing LSU in football for the first time, was led by sophomore halfback Duane Wood, who picked up 78 yards in 18 carries.

1956 Homecoming

Miss Barbara Purswell reigned as queen of the Homecoming festivities.

Homecoming was an unhappy one for the alumni and students. Florida's Gators, led by speed merchants Jackie Simpson and Jim Rountree, raced right past the Tigers for a 21-6 victory; the loss was LSU's fifth in a row. Florida wasted little time in hopping on the Tigers. Early in the first period the elusive Simpson grabbed a Tiger punt and raced 49 yards for the first touchdown. In the second period the Gators travelled 59 yards on the passing of quarterback Jimmy Dunn to grab a 14-0 lead, Rountree having scored the touchdown. LSU came back fighting in the third period, but a fumble put the Tigers out of the ball game. Florida center Bill Bolton recovered the bobbie on the LSU 26 and the Gators went on to push it over for a 21-0 lead. Dunn tossed seven yards to Rountree for the score. LSU fought back for one touchdown in the fourth period, but the Tigers couldn't come close to catching the Gators. The Tiger tally came on a 46 yard pass play from Win Turner to Red Hendrix. Steve Thompson paced LSU runners in the game with 35 yards on nine carries.

Miss. State 32

Sophomore Billy Stacy, Mississippi's one-man gang and an All-American if there ever was one, wrecked the Tigers soundly and convincingly by leading his Maroons to a 32-13 win. Stacy, the SEC's total offense leader during the season, did everything and did it well to turn the 50th battle between old rivals State and LSU into a Tiger rout. The soph quarterback scored three touchdowns and passed for a fourth, gained 77 yards running and 59 yards passing, kicked three times for a 43.0 average, returned five punts for 80 yards and ran back two kickoffs for 43 yards—probably the best all-around performance seen in Tiger stadium in years. Stacy sprinted 12 yards for State's first touchdown and then raced 45 yards on a punt return to put State out in front 13-0. He scored again on a seven-yard jaunt just before the half to give the Maroons a 20-0 halftime lead. LSU lost its chance to get back in the ball game when a clipping penalty nullified Brodnax's 94 yard punt return. State wrapped it up early in the third quarter on an intercepted pass and Frank Sabbatini's four yard plunge. LSU came growling back in the fourth quarter to cut State's lead to 26-13 on a 55-yard pass play from Reynolds to Wood and a line buck by Jimmy Taylor. But State scored again before the game ended.

Arkansas 7

And why not guts too?

Football's most famous jinx, LSU over Arkansas, repeated itself again as the heavily favored Razorback team fell before LSU's ground blitz 21-7 at the State Fair Stadium in Shreveport. It was LSU's fourth straight upset of a favored Arkansas team in four years. The intangible "jinx" that is the LSU-Arkansas game got plenty of help this time from a very tangible Jimmy Taylor, LSU's line-wrecking fullback who pounded Arkansas into submission with a 170 yard running show. The Baton Rouge junior scored two touchdowns and kicked an extra point to wrap up the SEC scoring championship for himself. After a scoreless first period, Taylor broke the game wide open with a 75 yard scoring jaunt. Several moments later, John Wood rushed Arkansas' Bonnie Underwood and hit him as he threw a pass. The deflected ball landed in the arms of Tiger Bob Ziegler who loped 27 yards for the second touchdown and a 13-0 lead. The Tigers got a third touchdown on a 23 yard drive after Earl Leggett recovered a Porker fumble; Taylor scored. LSU ends Wood and Billy Smith threw Arkansas Christian into the end zone for the safety.

Tulane 6

Big Red Brodnax ramblled for many yards during the season but he didn't get anywhere on this one as four Greenies closed in for the tackle.

The last gridiron appearance of old Mike—Tiger Stadium, 1954.

An LSU team that was bad enough to lose its first six games of the season was, in the end, good enough to win the biggest one of them all—the Tulane game. A superb performance by LSU's first unit—and especially by Taylor—won out over a hard-fighting Tulane 7-6 in what certainly must have been the most dramatic of all Tiger-Greenie battles. It was not good football, as evidenced by 10 fumbles, but it was exciting football. Before the game a cheering "duel" was organized, and 60,000 partisans from the Bayou Country probably set a Louisiana record for noise. In the first half, the yelling was mostly Tulane's. The heavily favored Greenies pushed LSU all around the field and got one touchdown on a fumble, a 27-yard drive, and Ronnie Quillian's scoring shot. Emmett Zelenka missed the extra point and Tulane had a 6-0 lead. The Greenies almost wrapped it up minutes later when they drove to LSU's 4 yard line. On first down, Greenie Gene Newton tossed a pass into the flat and the man of the hour, Taylor, intercepted and ran it out of the danger zone.

Dietzel took the big gamble; he kept his charges in the dressing room overtime at the half and changed his offense. They came out seconds away from a 15-yard delaying penalty and turned the tide for LSU. With a spread-out offense, the Tigers began to roll against the Tulane forward wall. They drove 58 yards to the Tulane 3 before the drive bogged down and the Greenies took over. On the next play, Durk Graham jarred Greenie Jimmy McCoy loose from the ball and Don Scully recovered for LSU on the Tulane two yard line. Taylor leaped and twisted toward the Greenie line and charged over on the second try. He then stepped back and booted the biggest point of the year. Tulane couldn't move against the LSU line for the rest of the third period and for most of the fourth. Then the Greenies drove to the LSU 19 before the incomplete passes ended the threat. With a minute to go, Tulane got its last bid, but Earl Leggett intercepted a desperation pass to end the threat and the ball game. The win gave LSU possession of the victory trophy—"The Rag" for the eighth straight year.

Basketball

Harry Rabenhorst, one of the most successful and easily the most durable of athletic coaches in Louisville during the twentieth century, called it quits in 1957. At the start of the basketball season, Coach Raby announced he was retiring from basketball and baseball, and would devote full-time to his duties as assistant athletic director. It marked the end of an always colorful, sometimes fabulous coaching career that spanned 36 years and brought countless honors to Raby and LSU.

During his reign as LSU coach from 1925 to 1957, Raby ranked as one of the winningest coaches in collegiate basketball and baseball. His cage teams ranked second to Kentucky in all-time SEC basketball play and won three conference titles and a national championship. Raby's last team, the 1956-57 Tigers, lacked the talent of many of his teams of the past, but they had the same old Rabenhorst trademark—hustling, never-say-die spirit. Through the first 19 games, the Tigers posted six victories and lost many heartbreakers, including close decisions to the conference leaders, Kentucky and Tulane. Top Tiger performer was Roger Sigler, the defending SEC scoring champ, who was averaging 19.3 points per game. Other leading scorers were senior forward Troy Rushing, who was averaging 16.1 points per game, and junior guard Dom Merle, averaging 12.8 points per game. Others in the starting line-up were senior Joe White at center and sophomore Jim Crisco at guard.

Under Coach 'Dub' Robinson, Louisiana State has fielded one of the Southeastern Conference's strongest tennis teams each year for the past decade. The 1957 season should be no exception. Robinson has assembled another fine team built around veteran lettermen Kenny Carter and Buddy Tudor. The brightest newcomer is the coach's son, Tommy Robinson, a sophomore who is ranked fourth in Louisiana State Men's Singles.

Carter and Robinson, playing together, are ranked as the eighth best junior doubles team in the nation. Other members of the varsity team include sophomore Larry Hammett, the third-ranking Louisiana junior singles player; sophomore Buddy Gomez, who went undefeated in freshman match play in 1956, and sophomore Frank Lee.

Mike Barbato, who has been tutoring championship golf teams at Louisiana State for the past 14 years will field another strong team for the Ole War Skule in 1957. Under Barbato's tutelage, LSU golf teams have won five Southeastern Conference, three Southern Intercollegiate and two National Collegiate golf championships.

Three top performers from 1956, Tommy Beard, Cecil Calhoun, and Jimmy Mangum, have graduated, but Barbato has built another team around the fourth member of last year's quartet, Donald "Scotty" Fraser. Fraser and junior Tommy Wulff are the only returning lettermen. Other squad members are juniors Bill Dodson, Neil Bigham, John Spradley, and Sophomore Don Sims.

Track

LSU's track and field team, coached by Al Moreau, rates as a prime contender for Southeastern Conference honors in 1957. Moreau has a team equal in strength, if not stronger, to the 1956 club that finished a close third in the 12-team race for championship honors. The 1957 schedule calls for participation in the Florida Relays and the Southwestern Relays and for three home meets. Present plans call for an addition to the seating capacity at the LSU track to accommodate increased crowds.

Members of the varsity track team include Joe Blanchard, hurdler; Robert Boguski, pole vaulter; John Davis, broad jumper and high jumper; Bobby Mack, sprinter; King Mott, quartermiler; Travis Pugh, miler and two-miler; Jim Lavin, shot putter; John Fort, javelin thrower; Jackie Horne, discus thrower; Bob Westerman, sprinter; John Burton, javelin thrower; Walter Blair, quartermiler; Robert Moore, javelin thrower; and Bill Bankhead, javelin thrower.

Speed and action are features of all LSU track meets.

Baseball took on a new look at LSU in 1957 as Raymond Didier took over the coaching reins from retiring Harry Rabenhorst, who had tutored the Tiger Baseball Teams since 1925. Didier, a college baseball coach for nine previous seasons, joined the LSN staff as baseball coach and as football assistant to Coach Paul Dietzil.

Waiting for Didier in 1957, was a 23-game schedule, including 16 Southeastern Conference games against Vanderbilt, Alabama, Ole Miss, Tulane, and Mississippi State. The material at hand includes nine members of the 1956 team that is posted a 9-11 record and wound up third in the western division of the SEC race.

Minor Sports

The many opportunities for recreation at LSU have resulted in a varied program of minor sports. The University has excellent facilities for tennis, handball, weight lifting, and basketball. Guided by the men's and women's departments of physical education, students can participate in sports such as volley ball, modern dance, gymnastics, and wrestling. In the near future, a golf course will be added to our expanding campus and will increase the participation in this sport.

Football at LSU is a year-round sport--the varsity, the intramurals, and spring training.

Minor Sports

One of the Ole War Skule's finest freshman football teams went through an undefeated season in 1956 and gave indications of a bright future for LSU. The Baby Bengals, under Coach Clarence "Pop" Strange, beat Ole Miss (44-20), Mississippi State (28-13), and Tulane (47-20) in compiling a perfect record. Stars of the fresh team included halfback Billy Cannon, a speedster who scored 45 points in three games, and quarterback Warren Babb, a precision passer. Other frosh starters were ends Scotty McClain and Don Norwood, tackles Mel Branch and Boyce Whittington, guards Emile Fournet and Manson Nelson, center Doug Skinner, halfback Johnny Robinson, fullback Max Fugler.

Working out on the parallel bars is an invigorating exercise.

Gymnastics is one of the many courses offered by the physical education department.

A spirited game of leap frog is enjoyed by a group of PE boys.

Intramurals

The intramural program at LSU has always been one of the most participated-in activities on the campus. Approximately 4,000 campus athletes took part in the 1957 program which included sports such as football, basketball, swimming, tennis, handball, ping-pong, volleyball, bowling, softball, and boxing. The Women's Recreation Association sponsors and schedules all events for LSU coed participation. Men's groups participating include the Campus League, the Fraternitiy League, and the ROTC Division. Realizing that all study and no recreation makes Mr. or Miss LSU student a dull person, the intramural program is designed so that everyone in the university can take part in a competitive sport.

Activities

Activities for the LSU student run the gamut from military to the Greeks, from honoraries to student centers. To get the most out of college life, the student takes advantage of as many of the many and varied activities as he possibly can. However, these are subjugated to the primary purpose of college—study. In a way, though, they are yet another form of learning in themselves. Through them, the student learns to work and play with other people. He learns to be a leader and a follower, to contribute and to carry out ideas. Thus, activities are an integral part of the everyday life of the student, and because of their lasting influences, they are an integral part of the future life of the student.

An outstanding project of the student government was the Dollars for Hungary campaign which raised several thousand dollars for Hungarian refugee relief.

The Field House is the meeting place for all student government groups.

Student Government

The Student Government program by LSU has always provided an effective liaison between the students and the officers of the University. The main body of this program is the Student Council which is annually elected by popular vote. The Council officially makes recommendations and requests to the University administration and represents the student body on several faculty committees.

The 1957 Council launched into an ambitious program of investigations and accomplishments. One of their first big projects was the welcome for Mike II. The council's most worthwhile project was the polio shot campaign. The activity of the Student Council did not end with these two projects. Other important topics which aroused student interest were the restoration of newspapers to the Field House, the all campus dance, Twirp Week, and the Mardi Gras holiday.

The Student Senate

The Student Senate is another branch of student government. Membership in the Senate is held by every officer of each school and college except the college president who serves on the Student Council. The 1957 Senate spent a busy year raising Dollars for Hungary, and investigating Hatcher Cafeteria, the Reveille, Campus Security, and the parking fines problem. Another project which the Senate proposed was the installation of victory lights in the Memorial Tower.

The Honor Council

A significant phase of the student government is its Honor Council activities. The members of the Honor Council represent each college and are appointed by the President of the Student Body. The Council works with the honor councils of each college to help maintain a high standard of honor and community conduct among L.S.U. students. The principal duty of the Honor Council is to determine the guilt or innocence of any student charged with conduct which would bring discredit upon him or the Student Body and to impose a suitable punishment for such violation.

Associated Women Students

The Associated Women Students, composed of all undergraduate co-eds in the University, promotes student participation in the government of women's residence halls, assists in freshman orientation, and co-ordinates the work of women's organizations on the campus. A.W.S. sponsors annually a leadership conference for women students and administers a point system which governs the number of major offices a woman student may hold in campus organizations. The work of the A.W.S. is carried out by its elected officers, the Advisory Board, the Governing Council, and the Judicial Board.

Latin American Council

Founded as an outgrowth of the Pan American House in 1942, the Latin American Council is an organization whose purpose is to foster better relations among American and Latin American students on the campus. The Council is represented on the Student Council and is an active participant in every phase of campus activities. Each year the council sponsors a Latin American Fiesta which is a very popular social event attended by hundreds of LSU students.

Dormitory Presidents

Every year the residents of each of the women's dormitories elect a president. These officers are responsible for many of the policies of student government within each dorm. Each president presides at the meetings of the House Council which is the representative governing body of the dormitory. The president appoints committees and represents her dorm at university functions. The presidents together comprise the Judicial Board which handles cases of serious infractions of the rules by women students.

Freshman Advisors

The Freshman Advisors are a group of outstanding upperclass women students who assist with the Freshman Orientation program and serve as advisors to freshman women throughout the year. Students are invited by the Dean of Women to become advisors after their records in the University have been carefully studied and they have been recommended by upperclass students, deans, and faculty members. The Freshman Advisor represents LSU in a personal way to each freshman women and assists each new student to make the best possible adjustment to University Life.

Proctors

Since World War II the men's dorms have been served by a very effective leadership organization—the proctor system. Each floor of the dorms is supervised by a junior or senior student who has been carefully selected on the basis of scholastic rating, character standing, and interest in the proctor program. Each proctor is responsible for the personal conduct in the dorms of the students on his floor. He assists in the general administration of the residence halls and co-operates in the promotion of worthwhile campus projects.

Greeks

Greek societies at LSU provide for their members a wide scope of advantages. In them, friendships are born which last throughout the years of college and, in many cases, throughout lifetimes. They teach their members to lead, and to follow the religious element as emphasized in all the Greeks. A number of social service projects, such as orphans' parties and hospital work, help the members to help others. Membership requires a certain grade average and those who have difficulty in a particular subject receive help. Scholastically, spiritually and socially, the Greeks carefully maintain their high standards.

Sororities at LSU strive foremost to maintain a high plane of personal relationships between girls who are friends and sisters. They strive for fine intellectual accomplishment and high scholastic standards. Through friendly get-togethers, guidance and counsel from each other and high spiritual goals, the members receive every benefit of college life.

"Alpha Chi, how we love thy name . . ." rang through the halls of Panhellenic as we sang one of our favorite songs at the first pledge-active dinner of the year. All through the year, we've shown just how true this phrase is—planning, working, and just having fun.

October was a big month for us because of Founder's Day, which we celebrated with our traditional banquet. Later on, of course, there was a surprise Halloween Party given for the pledges by the actives. Homecoming came around and we were really proud when Alpha Chi walked off with third place in Decorations and another trophy. Our Christmas Party was one to be remembered for a long time, considering the skit the actives presented. After we returned from the holidays, plans for our winter formal took precedent over practically all other business. And on the night of February 8, we knew that all the work had been worth it, as we watched the pledges step into the spotlight to receive special recognition. However, they were not the only ones to whom the night meant something extra-special—the seniors were there for the last time.

So now, when you hear a lot of girls singing and laughing in the Alpha Chi room, you'll know some of the reasons we have such a good time together.

"I love the pin you let me wear . . ." Through shared fun and hard work, we have experienced a growing closeness that gives deeper meaning to ADPI's favorite song. In September, an exciting rush week was climaxed with the induction of the new pledge class and the Black Diamond pledge supper at the home of Mrs. Glen Nordyke, president of the Baton Rouge alumnae.

We will probably never forget working on Homecoming decorations in the cow barn; or our first pledge-active meetings; or the visit, just after Thanksgiving, of our Grand President, Miss Maxine Blake. Our busiest weeks came in December, when we enjoyed a surprise Trim-the-Tree party the pledges gave, a slumber party at an alumna's camp, and our Christmas party at the Baton Rouge Country Club. The new semester brought more fun-filled tasks, with Initiation and our formal as our main concerns, but these were by no means our only activities. We were able to concentrate a little more on participating in intramural sports and making long-range plans for our very own sorority house. All of our time was not consumed in selfish interests, however, for we found satisfaction as we participated in the Dollars for Hungary project and other charity drives. Again, we realized how much is meant when we say, ". . . I love you, Alpha Delta Pi."

During the past year AOPi's activities have been many and varied. We began in the fall with a successful rush week, pledging twenty-nine girls. These new pledges were honored at the Pledge Banquet given at the home of Senator and Mrs. Horace Wilkinson. Making the bayou scene for our Homecoming entry proved quite a job, but lots of fun. Everyone likes food, so we had a Barbecue before the Mississippi State-LSU football game. Surprises were in store, too, for there was a surprise Thanksgiving party given by the pledges for the actives. The Founder's Day Banquet and the Alumnae Tea honoring the members were memorable events, and climaxing the series of semester activities was the Red Rose Ball on January 5.

Among our spring activities was the Initiation Banquet, an event that all of the new AOPi's will particularly remember. Then, we sponsored an Easter Egg Hunt for the orphans. Second semester was drawing to a close when Spring Houseparty time came around, and our traditional Senior Breakfast followed close behind really marking the end of the school year. And it has been quite a great one, with all of us participating in WRA tournaments, charity drives and many other areas of student life.

"Have fun, friends, and loyalty, that's the way to be an Alpha Xi . . . " These words written by a former Beta Iota sister held true at the pre-rush house-party. We kept busy, having a good time with friends who had come from other chapters to take part in rush. No need to say the loyalty was found in preparations for rush week which proved to be a great success.

December was a month to remember with the pledge-active Christmas Party and the Yuletide serenade for the alums. Then came the party for the orphans and it still remains a debate as to who had the better time—the orphans or the Alpha Xi's! With the coming of spring, we began preparing for several trips: first, to New Orleans for Founder's Day, then to Greenwell Springs to present a collection of books to the Grace Ferris Memorial Award Library, as we do every year. And it might have been with a reluctant sigh that we watched the Rose Formal bring another year to a close, had we not known that plans were already made to attend our National Convention in Biloxi in June—as Hostesses! What a wonderful plan to keep us busy until we turn our attention back to the campus, and September, in other words—another fabulous Rush Week.

Many, many long months ago at approximately the end of August, the Beta Sigs of Alpha Rho gathered at Ponchatoula Beach for pre-rush workshop. Shortly after this, the weary Betas managed to stay awake during a hectic, but successful rush week, which was highlighted by the traditional "Manhattan Moods" party. Informal rush followed at a slower pace, and then the new pledge class gave an open house for the fraternity pledges.

Activities certainly didn't lag during the winter months, as the season was begun with a Saturday afternoon workshop intended to orientate the new pledges as to the history, activities and gossip of the sorority. On the social side, we enjoyed a hayride to Plaquemine where a picnic supper awaited us, followed by a very informal dance.

We honored our founders in the traditional manner, as we passed this landmark in the year. Formal time came, and of course ours was the best of the season—as any pledge or active will tell you.

In the spring, we gathered to honor our graduating seniors with a banquet and then ended it all with a wonderful weekend of housepartying on the fabulous Mississippi Coast.

"Tawny grey owl, cardinal and straw . . ." on the door of the Chi Omega room greeted several hundred rushees this fall. Whether dressed as members of the Ivy League or representatives of the perfume types, we Chi O's attempted to express the ideals of our symphony—the theme of our final tea.

After rush week, reinforced with 33 new pledges, we prepared to whiz through another year at L.S.U., participating in campus activities as well as enjoying the social "fun times." We were represented on the Student Council, and the Inter-Dormitory Council. Athletics claimed our time, too, as we won second place in the volleyball tournament and were finalists in badminton. Again this year, we teamed up with Kappa in the KA Powder Puff Bowl.

We whizzed right up to our pledge-active Halloween party, which turned out to be quite a gala show (wardrobe by Charles Adams). The traditional Chi Omega Faculty Cocoa Party was again a grand success, even though someone did manage to lose the punch table. But the climax of the year's social events was the February formal held at the Bellemont, where our pledges were presented. And, so again, in a traditionally full year, the ideals and the spirit of Chi Omega have shone forth under the sign of the tawny grey owl.

'Neath the Tri Delta Moon there were many activities and honors for the 1956-57 school year. We could be found on the parade ground, marching as sponsors on Tuesday afternoons; or in the freshman dorms as Advisors; or maybe presiding over meetings of various clubs, committees, and organizations. The Freshman, GUMBO and Homecoming Courts were all proud to claim Tri Deltas among their honored few. And when we weren't busy with all of these campus doings, our sorority activities kept us in a whirl.

Right before rush week in September, we gathered at Grand Isle for a House Party. After a successful week, we welcomed thirty-eight new pledges at the Bid Supper and then plunged into a seige of parties during Alpha Week. Soon the Smarty Party came along, where we honored girls with averages of 2.0 or above. Then our mothers and alums were entertained at the Halloween Party. November brought the Founder's Day Banquet; and December, the Pine Party given by the pledges, and the Powder Puff Bowl (we played with Chi O—and won). Activities rolled on in the new year with the "Under-the-Sea Formal," the Delta Omega Birthday Party and Delta Week and Initiation. The Tri Psi Chicken Fry (our mothers are the greatest) and our May House Party wrapped up the year.

Delta Gamma's ninth year on campus began in September with a successful rush season. Then, in the annual swimming meet, Simone, Jackie and Linda plunged into the finals. In October, our province officer visited us and was welcomed with a breakfast following the Homecoming game, to which alums and mothers were also invited. November was hayride month, the DG's agreed, as we danced and dined in perfect harvest-moon weather.

When the pledges planned the customary post-Christmas party for the children at the School for the Blind, they wondered about entertainment. However, the children took care of that, with their songs, stories and games. We were all proud, too, the day Ann Fortner's Brownies from the school appeared on the local television station. Pat and JoAnn worked with another Brownie troop in Baton Rouge, helping them work toward their "fly-up" wings.

In March, our formal was held at Mike and Tony's, where we danced to the music of the Eight Tones. As the last "big" social event of the year, it was quite a success, leaving us with memories to cherish throughout the summer.

So ends another year for Delta Gamma and the girls who love her golden anchor.

After a successful rush week, for the third straight year we filled the Panhellenic quota and pledged thirty-eight new girls. As a means of getting "really" acquainted, we left (equipped with bathing suits and jeans) for a weekend houseparty at Camp Singing Waters. Here the pledges presented their version of Rush Week which was certainly enjoyed by all.

Amid song and candlelight, Sigma honored its six founders at a banquet held at the Bellemont. Gail Gibbens Strickley, 1954 President, was guest speaker. As one facet of our philanthropic program, we sang Christmas carols at the Old Folks Home and presented them with gifts. Sigmas aren't too old to enjoy Easter, as we proved when, with Lambda Chi, we gave an Easter Egg Hunt at City Park for the Children from the Louisiana School for the Deaf.

For the second year running, we captured first place in the Sigma Chi Pirogue Derby. The Sigma Chi's also honored the Delta Zeta's later during the year with a buffet dinner and dance at their house. From the looks of things one would probably think that sorority life is all play and no work. However, parties do not yield to the many positions that are held by our members on the campus, and the honors they have received.

Last fall's rush season marked Epsilon's 47th year on campus, and a very successful year it was. Five KD's held offices on their dormitory House Councils, while many others were elected to membership in honorary organizations in their colleges. In the first WRA activity of the year, the Swimming Meet, we walked off with top honors and our relay team set a new LSU pool record. Also in the fall, there was a "Getting to Know You" slumber party at the Prescott's home; a surprise Halloween party for the pledges, and our Founder's Day at the Baton Rouge Country Club on October 23, with almost 150 pledges, actives and alums attending. With the SAE's, we entertained the orphans at a Christmas Party, which has become a well-established tradition.

Members of Epsilon worked hard with Gamma Kappa, our sister chapter at SLI; in September we assisted with the installation of the chapter and in December, helped with their first initiation. Outstanding members received awards at the annual garden party, which made us think of our 1956 honor initiate, Miss Ollie Burden. When February came, we began counting the days until the White Rose Formal and the night proved to be one of the most memorable of the year. Houseparty followed, as did exams, and it was farewell for the summer.

The Kappas began the 1957-57 session by receiving the first place trophy for Homecoming decorations—"We'll Bewitch 'Em," and second place for Jane Pugh's poster. We were honored to have such visitors as Mrs. Louise Barbeck, national officer; Miss Jeanne Sigfried, field secretary; and Mrs. Edmund Crump, province director of chapters.

We are certainly proud of our many members who participate in student government, hold membership in various honorary organizations, are ROTC sponsors, and take leading roles in the Freshman Advisor Program. When election time caught up with us, we helped the Baton Rouge Jaycees in the "Get Out the Vote" campaign. During the Christmas season, there was the party for the orphans (with the Dekes), and the Big and Little Sister get-together at Dotty Tate's home. Kappas playing football? Why, yes, in the KA Powder Puff Bowl!

Also standouts on our list of events were Founder's Day on October 12, the Bermuda Shorts party, the Halloween party given by the pledges, and our spring houseparty. Initiation, which was in a class by itself, was followed by the Initiation Banquet honoring the new wearers of the Golden Key. "Jazz 'n Formal" was indeed the highlight of another Kappa year at LSU.

Last summer at our national convention, Alpha Eta was chosen as the most outstanding chapter of Phi Mu in the country. We merited this honor by our chapter work as a whole, and because of our members, who take leading roles in all phases of campus life.

Bermuda shorts were the order of the day, when we gathered at the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Barksdale for a Bar-B-Q in October. This seemed to set off a string of activities that lasted till the end of school. Among these were parties—at Halloween the actives surprised the pledges (dressed ghoulishly for the occasion); then, at Christmastime, the pledges turned the tables and did a little surprising of their own. During this time, however, we did other things besides party. For Thanksgiving and Christmas, the chapter sent baskets to needy families; later on, our pledges made rag-dolls for the children at the School for the Deaf. "It's a Hare-Raising Occasion" we said when Homecoming rolled around—and walked off with second place in decorations.

Spring found us knee-deep in plans for our Pink Castle Ball at the Bellemont. Practicing for Song Fest (last year we placed second) kept us busy, too, as did planning for our weekend at Gulf Hills, the final event on our year's agenda.

The trials and tribulations of rush were soon forgotten with the realization of a great pledge class at the end of this week. Following pledging, there was a supper in honor of these girls, and once again, the Pi Phi's were off to a wonderful year. In the fall, we were busy with Homecoming decorations with the theme "Rocking on Our Record", which was awarded fourth place. Following this, there were many athletic events, including the Powder Puff Bowl, and (thanks to Martha Charlotte and Betty) top honors in the Archery tournament.

Christmas came, and the ATO's and Pi Phi's gave a party for the orphans. In March, we celebrated "Arrow Week" to prepare the pledges for initiation. The following month, we honored our founders at our annual banquet. May brought with it the Spring Formal in honor of the initiates and our annual Houseparty. During the year Pi Phi's participated in campus activities: many were active in honorary and professional organizations, several were ROTC Sponsors, others served as Freshman Advisors, while still others appeared in the Freshman Day Court and in the finals for "Darling of LSU." And again this year, this title, too, was claimed by—a Pi Phi.

“Heavenly Days”, the final party given by AEPHi during Rush Week, marked the beginning of busy days of actives and pledges. The pledges chose as their project for the year visiting the children at Blundon Orphanage, and the sorority as a whole made sock dolls for distribution during the holiday season. We were entertained by alumnae on several occasions, and there were frequent pledge-active parties, including suppers and desserts in the sorority room.

In addition to the “Poverty Party” given by the pledges, and a Valentine Party given by the actives, the social calendar was completed with the annual Spring Formal in March. We AEPHi’s have spent a wonderful and successful year and each member is anxiously awaiting next year’s rush season.

Towards the end of each college year, some of the top gals on campus appear to have "flipped." This illusion is brought about by DGD, an intersorority of fun and frolic. It's initiation time! The fraternities are serenaded with "the dagger is our brother, the devil is our keeper;" the pledges become "its" and sport cute little red beanies.

DGD girls are chosen for their character, congeniality and friendship, from among the members of the Greek letter sororities on campus. During the year, the organization contributes to the library fund and gives supplies to needy families in this area.

Next time you see a co-ed in dirty jeans directing traffic in Tiger Town, or hear the Alma Mater being sung from a tree-top, relax—it's DGD.

Lambda Intersorority has as its goal bringing the Greek sororities closer together and promoting good feeling and friendliness among these organizations. Its membership is composed of five girls from each sorority on campus. Each fall, the organization sponsors a transfer orientation, which includes a tour of the campus and a tea with members of the faculty. Also in connection with its orientation program, an award is presented each year to the transfer student who had shown outstanding achievement in her first year at Louisiana State University.

At Christmas-time, the girls get together to sponsor a charitable project in the Baton Rouge area. And then in the spring, they can be found on the softball field, as they settle the score with their traditional rivals, the DGD's.

Women's Panhellenic Council is made up of a junior and senior delegate from each sorority on campus. The offices are held by the senior delegates, in rotation, in order of the founding dates of their sororities. Cooperating with the university administration, the Council seeks to maintain high social standards and to further fine intellectual accomplishment, as well as sound scholarship. In the field of sorority and intersorority relations, it compiles rules governing rushing, pledging and initiation, and discusses problems arising in sorority and university life.

An open house sponsored by this group was held on the morning of Homecoming in the Panhellenion. Then, a Christmas Tree Lighting ceremony was initiated this year, at which all of the campus Christmas lights were turned on. The Council also sponsors an annual Spring Workshop for new sorority officers.

Fraternities

Fraternities at LSU seek to strengthen and inspire the boys who are brothers under a common creed of loyalty. They pledge themselves to the highest of ideals—socially, morally and scholastically. Under this pledge, the members are helped to develop into lifelong friends, well-rounded students and a closer fellowship of men.

All of the social fraternities on the campus are governed by the Men's Interfraternity Council. Each fraternity has two representatives on the council, one selected by the fraternity and the President automatically the other. As a group, these representatives set up rules and policies that the fraternities are guided by in such activities as rushing and pledging.

Religious Emphasis Week was launched by the IFC, promoting religious and spiritual interest among the students of LSU. The Hungary Drive was successfully aided by the IFC as well as the United Givers' Drive.

Each year, a Greek Week is sponsored by the IFC to enhance the value of the fraternities on campus and for the benefit of the faculty, administration and the university community.

The first chapter of Acacia Fraternity in the true South was chartered February 11, 1956 at Louisiana State University, making this chapter the 43rd in the nation. With the strong support of the Masonic Lodge of Louisiana, the chapter has grown to 46 men and looks forward to the opening of its new home for the rush season of 1957.

The life of all Acacia is guided by its purpose: "To strengthen the ties of friendship, one with another; to prepare ourselves as educated men to take a more active part and have a greater influence in the affairs of the community in which we may reside; and, above all to seek the truth and know it, to give light to those with whom we may be associated as we travel along life's pathway."

Rush week began this year for the ATO's in characteristic fashion, with their famous Bayou Brawl. Through the weeks of first semester, we got together for a party every Saturday night after the game—and on other occasions, too. In December, there was our annual Christmas party at the Old State Capitol and, also another party—when we joined hands with the Pi Phi's to give a group of orphans a real Christmas party. Our social calendar was rounded out by the annual formal, and other events to keep the boys busy (maybe ping-pong on the patio?).

Our influence on the campus was evidenced by the number of leading positions held by ATO's, such as President of the Student Body, President of the Music School, President of the "L" Club, President of the Arnold Air Society, Wing Commander, members of Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities, to name a few. Then there are quite a few outstanding varsity football players numbered among the brothers. And while we're on the subject of athletics, it might be a good idea to mention our active participation in all of the phases of intramural sports. In other words, name any campus activity—then count the ATO's who participate in it!

Ever since Zeta Zeta chapter was established at LSU in 1923, the Dekes have shown outstanding leadership qualities in every phase of campus life. And this doesn't stop at the gates of the University—for in Law School, Med School and in later years, we have proven our claim to this statement. And when its time to relax, we seem to have a special knack for giving the best parties, too. For instance, we brightened an otherwise gloomy football season with our post-game parties, which really took some of the sting out of our defeats. One party in particular will go down in history—the one in New Orleans after we watched the Tigers “clobber” Tulane; what a night!

Christmas season brought a string of good times—like the party where we had two bands during intermission. Then there was the Kappa-Deke get-together for some under-privileged children. After we came back to school the cycle started all over again, with the Dogpatch Party and the Bowery Party. Then, the “good brothers” went formal, and celebrated in typical Deke style. Mention Covington and we recall our picnic over at “Favrotville,” with the Tulane chapter. These, and many other “Blasts” helped relieve the strain of the “books” that plague every college student. But we still had time for intramural sports, and have our eye on the Sweepstakes Trophy.

Once again the Stars and Bars of Kappa Alpha flew high in front of the "Cracker-Box" Mansion of Southern Gentlemen. We Rebels began the year by pledging thirty rushees, then went on to greater heights. With inspiration from and under the leadership of A Man called "Superduck," the Knights of Kappa Alpha clashed on the gridiron with the milk and doughnut boys of Sigma Chi. This eventful occasion was the annual Charity Bowl, which we sponsor in connection with the Good Fellows Toy Fund.

All of our other activities didn't keep us from having fun, however. Two of our outstanding parties of the year were the Christmas Party and the French Apache Party. However, the supreme KA social event (as always) was the Old South Ball, with its romantic atmosphere of the ante-bellum south. We delivered invitations by mounted, uniformed messenger; then, donned Confederate uniforms and southern gentleman costumes, while our dates wore traditional ante-bellum dresses, setting the stage for our trip back to the last century. At the beginning of the weekend, we proclaimed our secession from the Union; then, hoisted the Stars and Bars, and spent the rest of the weekend singing Dixie, and enjoying ourselves in the delightful southern manner.

Kappa Sigma is living proof of the old adage, "History repeats itself," for we have had another banner year. Rush Week was really "cool" with the newly installed air-conditioning system and the pledging of forty-two fine young men. Football season proved to be a blast, as parties were given after every game, and we culminated Homecoming with the appropriate decorations and dance. The annual Christmas Party was a huge success; most assuredly. Other parties such as the "Damon Runyon Party," the "Circus Party," (given by the pledges) and others were really simply sporty! No wonder we're looking forward to the "Star Dust Formal" with anticipation of a wonderful time.

The Founder's Day Banquet was a big event, and was highlighted by the fact that the National Worthy Grand Master of all Kappa Sigma is a graduate of LSU and a Gamma alumni—Mr. George Reymond. His portrait was presented to the chapter at the banquet, which was in honor of Brother Reymond. We're striving to keep our high scholastic average and we're looking forward to the defense of the Sweepstakes Trophy won last year. Of course, just these few activities cannot begin to tell of the good times had or the life-time friends made at the old Kappa Sig House. But it is great!

Since its founding in the Tea Party region, Lambda Chi has spread over the nation and Canada to become the largest national fraternity with chapters on 152 campuses. Here in the Bayou country, Lambda Chi has initiated over 875 members since 1914; during this time we have never finished below the All-Men's Scholastic average for the year and this year was no exception. Aside from our paramount objective of an education, we found time enough to do many other things; we could be found on the gridiron, the diamond, the basketball court, in the Military (where we were many in number), on the Student Council, in the Honoraries—wherever there was work to be done, there was a Lambda Chi.

For our parties, we imported the best bands that economy would permit and celebrated on every possible occasion. We were particularly honored to have Miss Carolann Conner, the fraternity's International Crescent Girl, present to take part in rush activities. Athletic participation was another of our hobbies and we have won the football championship for the second year running; we're trying to bring home as many trophies as we did last year, when the grand total was nine. A great year in the Bond of Lambda Chi Alpha, Architect of Men!

SAE has completed another year of social, athletic, scholastic, and campus citizenship attainments. Our parties, as always, were highlights of the year—for example, the Corral Party and the Beachcomber's Ball. All social functions are not directed at self-entertainment, however, since Christmas and Easter parties are always given for local orphans. Athletics, too are an integral part of the fraternity year—from ping-pong to football in intramurals. We have consistently ranked near the top in intramurals as was shown by third place in the running for the Sweepstakes Trophy last year. (We even have an athletic lion—he really does get around; swims well, too!)

In scholarship, the fraternity average was among the top five and well above the all-men's average. We are justly proud of our members who have boosted this score by attaining nearly perfect averages. Campus citizenship is not neglected as it witnessed by members running for and holding elective positions in student government. In recognition of their outstanding participation in positions of leadership, SAE's have been selected for membership in ODK and have appeared in WHO'S WHO. Such are the typical activities of a year led by "Phi Alpha's guiding light."

Again this year, we won the $1000 James A. Noe Sweepstakes Trophy for the best Homecoming decoration. Other awards came our way, also, as we captured a number of first place trophies and the Sweepstakes Trophy of the Purple Bracket for interfraternity athletics. In other words, Phi Delts really go out for sports in a big way.

Highlights of the social calendar (which was full of our activities) were the parties we gave after each and every football game; the Christmas party was a great one, with some of the comic presents getting quite a few laughs. Later on, there was the Good Ship Phi Party, for which we all dressed as beach-combers, and then, the Phi Delta Theta Formal—an event which proved to come up to our expectations.

Phi Delta Theta prides itself on its high scholastic standing which is evidenced by the large number of brothers holding membership in such honorary organizations as Phi Eta Sigma, Pi Mu Epsilon, Alpha Kappa Psi, Alpha Chi Sigma, and Phi Gamma Mu. Military and service organizations, too, claim some of our time here at LSU. But always there's a chance to relax over at the house with the other members of the "grand old fraternity."

September brought us back to our new house on Fraternity Row, which remains our pride and joy. It is one symbol of the growth of Beta Rho chapter since it was established at LSU in 1948; we've really "taken root," now. But that doesn't mean we're standing still—just look at the Phi Gams who are student leaders in their fields, and in university-wide activities. For instance, we take an active part (is there any other kind) in the Military, in student government, in professional, honorary, and religious organizations. The editor of the LSU ENGINEER this year was one of the brothers, too.

Socially, the Black Diamond Formal was the highlight of the school year. But there were other, less formal parties where we had just as much fun. One of these more "informal" get-togethers was the Fiji Island Ball, where we had a chance to "go native" complete with realistic costumes in keeping with the party's theme. Ever see palm trees on campus? Well, there were for our party!

We have certainly had one more outstanding year, and are looking forward to even better things in store for next year. With that idea in mind, we're planning another terrific rush week!

From the gracious white colonial "house of southern woods" came another eventful year. From climbing radio towers to social events, we were extremely active. This past year has given Sigma Chi many things of which to be proud; Sigs belonging to Phi Eta Sigma and other honoraries were numerous; Varsity teams headed by Sigs are no novelty; in intramurals we captured honors in football, basketball, tennis, and track. Politics appealed to many this year and A & S and Commerce had Sigs at their head.

On the lighter side, two pledges experienced radio-tower-climbing for the first time when they recovered the cherished Sweepstakes Trophy. On a Tuesday night in December, they reported that the city really looked great from 245 feet up! The results? Well, besides a retrieved trophy, there were two tired pledges and no pledge test that Tuesday. As for parties, there was the famous Milk and Doughnut Party, the parties after the football games and many others. The Pirogue Derby and Sorority Field Day once again claimed widespread attention. At Christmas-time, the Mother's Club added to the festivities of the season. But naturally, the climax of the social activities was the Sweet-heart Formal, an elegant tradition of Sigma Chi.

As usual, we Sigma Nu's retained our lofty perch on the LSU social ladder. It's no wonder, either, considering the Christmas party and the White Star Formal. Then there was our own personal "piece de resistance," the annual Taxi Dance. These gatherings proved beyond a doubt that the boys of Sigma Nu knew how to party. We Snakes were not lacking scholastically, though, since we ranked high on the LSU fraternity scholarship list. In fact, last year Phi chapter rated second place in scholastic average of all the one hundred twenty-three Sigma Nu chapters across the nation.

We have really enjoyed participating in interfraternity athletics and other IFC-sponsored activities such as Greek Week, which drew the social fraternities closer together. Then our initiation was a red-letter event for all the brothers—new and old. Even though they had pulled all the old tricks—like hiding the silver—we were proud to see them wearing the Sigma Nu pin at last.

All through the year, the house has been the center of activity for all of us—from sun-up to sunset, and for the graduating seniors it will become a place of many memories, of days in Sigma Nu.

We started out this school year with a bang-up rush week and some terrific parties. One of our main assets was a whole bushel-full of good-looking rush girls and a crazy band tagged the "Rhythm Play Boys." Man! These studs really started the bawl rollin'. As a result, we Theta Kaps reaped in a crazy harvest of about forty-five cool pledge-cats. Football season rolled around and everybody was all hung up on football games so we decided to rouse the house for a party or two after the games. Then came Homecoming Day! What a jive! After the game, we had rockin' Robert Milburn and his jive gang. We came through like fish to win the Sigma Chi Pirogue Derby and swam off with the traditional paddle.

After the pigskin era, we settled down to some interfraternity sports in which we did pretty hot for ourselves. 'Course our social blasts didn't cease. We came through with a visit to the North Pole via a Christmas Party and Santa Claus. Then came our annual "Belle of the Ball" formal, closely followed by the yearly awards banquet. To climax another brilliant year at the "Ole War Skule" we turned South Sea Islanders to have a hula-hula, bula-bula swinging time.

After a successful rush week, ZBT launched its athletic campaign which netted several trophy championships. The advent of football season marked the opening of our social activities with pre-game buffets and post-game parties. Highlighting the year's calendar were the Pledge-Active football game, and the Pledge-Active party where we really had a good time. The annual Blue and White Formal was quite an affair. And the ZBTahiti party was one of the best ever, with crawfish and bamboo all over. Oh, yes—Homecoming weekend, a regular melee of activity, was marked by a tremendous fiasco in the form of a black monster-scrapbook which drew many a second glance—but was no winner.

Despite the busy schedule, we Zebees managed to rank second in scholarship among all fraternities. Several of our members are prominent on campus—IFC and IFAC presidents are both Zebees; others are officers of their colleges or active in some other capacity in student government. This year as usual, we took part in interfraternity athletics and other activities. As exams approach with menacing speed, we like to try to forget the not-too-distant future and think a little about the past year, with its work and fun at the ZBT House.

It has been a busy year from the start for the Delta Sigs. After completing a very successful rush week in September, we were on our way to one of our best years. Besides patricipating in the many activities on campus, we organized a few ourselves. For instance, there was the "Sailor's Ball" aboard the good ship Delta Sig. And then the Carnation Ball came along as the Big Event. After that there were other parties, such as the Backwards Party, where we Delta Sigs and our dates had quite a good time.

This year we welcomed a new Housemother, Mrs. Mary Young. Although she is new at the occupation, she has really proved to be one of the best on the campus. We're really glad to have Mrs. Young with us in the house on Fraternity Row.

After several semesters of hard work, we can proudly say that our chapter is on its own two feet again, ready to occupy its proper place along with the other fraternities on campus. For the second consecutive year, we have won the inter-fraternity volleyball competitions, and have participated outstandingly in several other sports.

Along with our basic ideal of Pan-American union and friendship, we have had a program and theme for discussion in keeping with this. Throughout the year this subject has been important to us—the role that we members of Phi Iota Alpha should play as the economic, social, and political leaders of the Latin America of tomorrow. Within the framework of our fraternity, we have found some of the answers to these questions.

We started the school year with a flurry of rush parties, and realized a successful rush season for our efforts with a new, ambitious pledge class. Homecoming was a busy time for the Pikes. Through the hard work and co-operation of everyone, a two-stage waterfall was constructed which won praises from all who observed. Following this, as after all home games we met at our new ultra-modern house to celebrate the victory or forget the loss with a loud-playing band and lots of fun. About the middle of first semester, the actives challenged the pledges to a football game and then lost, claiming business and not athletic abilities. However, the fraternity ranks third in their bracket in interfraternity athletics. This was a good year for us Pikes and next year should prove even better for the hard-working, hard-playing PiKA's.

Tekes were very active in student government this year—four members on the Student Senate and four more on the Student Council. Other Tekes served in positions of leadership in many professional, honorary and religious organizations. In the AROTC and the AFROTC, too, we set an example of service, having many officers in both branches. TKE ranked second to Sigma Chi in scholarship this year. On the social scene there were numerous activities from the fireside singing of after-the-game parties to the glitter and ceremony of the Red Carnation Ball in April. Another outstanding party was our own Beaux Arts Ball in the spring.

Our faculty advisor, Dr. Phillip W. West, world-famous analytical chemist and Boyd Professor of Chemistry, received the national honor, Top Teke of 1956.

Samurai is an honorary interfraternity consisting of five members of each fraternity on this campus. Members of national fraternities that have not established chapters on campus may also be invited to join the organization. Samurai's purpose is to promote friendly relations among the various fraternities; to bring into closer fellowship men commonly possessing attributes of character, intelligence, and culture; and the stimulation of a high idealism among these men.

Our social functions are campus-renowned, and eagerly anticipated each semester. When Samurai initiates, everyone knows it—especially the girls who discover serenading gallants on the steps of their dormitories, jumping eagerly to open doors for them!

IFAC has enjoyed phenomenal growth since its origin as a permanent standing committee of the IFC because of its appeal to the inexperienced many, rather than the expert few. Pictured on this page are the handsome individuals who represent their respective fraternities; however, in a meeting these sweet smiling young lads change to ferocious arbitrators on the point system, protests, fines, officiating, etc. On a more serious note, these boys are responsible to the council and to their fraternities for seeing that athletic events are scheduled and played at the right time and place. At the Watershow in May, trophies are awarded to bracket winners for sweepstake and individual sports. Only through the cooperation of all fraternities and the Intramural Athletic Department is this program possible.

Honoraries

Outstanding students at LSU do not go unpraised. Honorary societies in every possible field of endeavor extend membership to these deserving students. Their purpose is to recognize men and women who have attained a high standard of efficiency in college activities. This recognition is designed to inspire others to attainments along similar lines. The Honoraries bring together the most representative students in all phases of college life and also bring together the students and faculty in organizations of mutual interest. To be extended an invitation for membership in any of honoraries is considered one of the highest honors to be achieved.

Omicron Delta Kappa

Omicron Delta Kappa is a leadership honor society for men. It is designed to recognize excellence whether it be obtained in scholarship, leadership, athletics, music, drama, or any of the many facets of college life. The first circle was established on the Washington and Lee Campus in 1914. The Louisiana State University Circle was organized and affiliated with the national organization in 1933. Twice a year the society "taps" a select group of men from the student body and the faculty and the administration.

Other than being an honor society, the Circle is designed to stimulate discussion of campus problems among its members. More problems are discussed than solved; more polemics are given than analytical discussions—but such is the way of the world. However, the Circle always does succeed in solving the problems of where it will eat at its next dinner meeting.

Thus, it can be said that ODK is not only the highest honor society for men on the L.S.U. campus, but a valuable forum for discussing important problems.

Mortar Board, standing for leadership, scholarship and service, was founded in 1918 at Syracuse, New York, by representatives from old and well-established senior honor societies at Cornell University, Ohio State University, University of Michigan and Swarthmore College. Being recognized by this organization is the highest honor an undergraduate woman can receive. In 1934, Blazer Chapter was installed at LSU.

Each year Blazer Chapter gives a Smarty Party for junior women who have maintained at least a 2.0 over-all average. During the Homecoming celebration, Mortar Board with members of ODK furnish an information booth to help our alumni, and in the spring it joins with ODK to co-sponsor the annual Honors Day Convocation. At this time Mortar Board presents an award to the outstanding freshman girl and "caps" the girls of the next year's chapter.

Alpha Lambda Delta

Since Alpha Lambda Delta is an organization composed of freshmen girls who maintain a 2.5 average their first semester or first two semesters as a freshman, ALD members are found in any and every college on campus. The organization has a "B-average tea" in East Hall reception room in December and a banquet with Phi Eta Sigma in March at the Faculty Club. There are no definite meeting times. Only when necessary the Council (officers) meets and decides any current business.

Alpha Lambda Delta was founded at the University of Illinois in 1924.

Encourage excellency in those pre-med students! This is the "war song" of AED. From the early fall initiation to the annual picnic late in the spring, AED is continually striving to achieve the goal of its "war song."

Some of the means of achieving this goal include meetings where subjects are discussed by members, faculty, or personnel from medical schools. Also visits to hospitals, medical schools and centers, and the showing of medical films. This is the encouragement; and this is AED.

Alpha Zeta, an organization of the outstanding men of all areas of agriculture, closes its forty-first year on the campus of L.S.U. The Louisiana Chapter increased its membership by approximately thirty-five men of character, leadership, and scholastic ability.

The scholastically outstanding freshman entering the College of Agriculture was recognized at the fall convocation of the College, and at the spring convocation, the outstanding Alpha Zeta senior received recognition and an award for his work in the chapter.

Again this year Alpha Zeta opened its doors to allow zealous young men to take their place in every area of this great field, Agriculture.

 ADAM G. NUNEZ ..... Secretary
 TOM TANNER ..... Treasurer

After another year of Civil Code Rallies and related cultural functions, Beta Epsilon of Gamma Eta Gamma is pleased to announce an enlarging and increasingly enlightened membership. With such stalwarts as Troy Henderson and Roy Liuzza, who thrill at the mysteries of the law, and who enjoy a good party even more, the chapter's scholastic average has slipped steadily upward. Although devoted primarily to the thoughtful examination of jurisprudence, the members frequently find time for extra-curricular gambols, not the least of which are the picnics and socials on the grounds of Rosalba, home of Mr. Joe Loret, the Chapter's elder statesman. Mr. Loret is a gracious host, and members always leave in excellent spirits.

Geological and Mining Society

They can be recognized by their long beards and untrimmed hair. These are the neophytes of the Geological and Mining Society.

This band of young men with high ideals of character and leadership are addicted to the professions of Geology and Petroleum Engineering. Once a month, they put aside their picks and slide rules to attend a meeting in the Geology auditorium. Pre-meeting conversation may range from last summer's field camp to next month's "Tea Party." Here, after the formal business, it is the policy of G. & M. to bring its members into contact with the faculty and successful men in the profession.

The highlight of each semester is a banquet, where the hardy young neophytes, having been shorn of their prized "Van Dykes," are presented formally to the faculty and distinguished speakers.

Kappa Delta Pi

These are the teachers of tomorrow—devoted creatures who will guide the young minds, drive them if necessary. These are the “smarties,” who for some unknown reason “burned the midnight oil,” and profited by it. These are the members of Kappa Delta Pi, Honor Society for men and women in Education.

They meet formally in Old Peabody Hall once a month, and informally at the Field House, or the Lab School, or Bakers, or anywhere. You can always identify them by their mumblings: “the whole child, the unit of work, the core curriculum, motivation, or purposeful
activities.”

Once every semester they congregate around the banquet board or at a wiener roast and of course, “talk shop.” Their new members are initiated and new officers take over their responsibilities.

These are the people who have pledged their lives to the kids, bless 'em.

Mu Sigma Rho

Mu sigma Rho members meet each month in the scholarly confines of the Law Building. An attempt is made to keep the oil of learning burning brightly by bringing in outstanding lecturers from the faculty and outside groups. Formal business is conducted after the program which is a decided departure from general procedure.

Initiations are anticipated by the members as each is highlighted by a feast at the Faculty Club. Election of new officers is held at the banquet in the Spring.

In the interest of encouraging scholarship, Mu Sigma societies have been formed in high schools throughout the state. An essay contest is conducted annually for members of these high school societies, and the award is made at a luncheon in the spring.

SHERRY KAY McDOWELL ..... Secretary
ALI TANGOREN ..... Treasurer

Members of Pi Mu Epsilon are found from many colleges on the campus; Law, Education, Arts and Sciences, and Engineering. Even though the membership is from various colleges, members have one common interest; i.e., proficiency in mathematics. Meetings are held throughout the year with programs based on mathematical topics.

Annually the chapter looks forward to a banquet following initiation of its new members. At this banquet, the two awards sponsored by the fraternity are presented. One is a freshman award, based on Honors Examination, and the other is a Senior Award based on the work taken in mathematics and the quality of work done.

Pi Mu Epsilon, associated with the College of Arts & Sciences, was founded at Syracuse University in 1914. The society's chapter at L.S.U., Louisiana Alpha, was begun in 1939.

To the amazement of those few who are aware of its existence, the Martin Inn of Phi Delta Phi legal fraternity is still in esse after the passage of another academic year. Not only has the organization survived, it has burgeoned, the active membership having climbed to a total of 41 persons, most of whom have paid their dues. In evidence of the abounding vigor for which the Inn is noted, the members gathered on the first Wednesday of each month at various places chosen by the officer in charge of choosing, to consume overpowering quantities of sassafras tea and healing waters and to sing rousing odes to the glory of Phi Delta Phi. Additionally, the officer in charge of arranging, arranged to have present, at each meeting, orators of undoubted renown whose stirring dissertations prodded the members to thoughts of high ethics and deeds of valor.

During the annual pledge harvest, the Inn again demonstrated its unchallenged preeminence in the field of pledge picking. Only those candidates possessed of high moral standing, demonstrable academic achievement and money sufficient to pay the initiation fee, were considered. But, notwithstanding the stringency of the aforesaid limitations, the Inn pledged 19 new members.

The beginning of the 1956 school year saw the "elite" of the mechanical engineers, the members of Pi Tau Sigma, national honor mechanical engineering fraternity, faced with a new and different type of problem—one of finances. But as in all problems, the engineers solved it without too much difficulty.

A very successful initiation followed by a banquet at Bob and Jakes has helped the social season. Not long after this, one of the members attended the fraternity's annual convention in "yankee land" and brought back some new ideas and enthusiasm which, along with Engineers' Day, will help us roll along for another year.

Alpha Chapter of Sigma Alpha Iota, which is a national professional music fraternity for women, was founded in 1903 in Ann Arbor, Michigan. Sigma Phi Chapter at Louisiana State University was chartered in 1926.

To become a member, a student must have an overall C average, and a B average in music the semester before selection to membership. One of the purposes of the organization is to promote competence and achievement in music.

Among the activities of the organization are monthly musicales which are presented by members of the group; a welcome tea for freshman and transfer students; and ushering for concerts.

In October, SAI joined Phi Mu Alpha and Delta Omicron in sponsoring a Fun Day in the music school. Especially entertaining was the Ballet by Shirley Goldberg to the music of Swan Lake.

The Tau Beta Pi Association, national engineering honor society, was founded at Lehigh University in 1885, "to mark in a fitting manner those who have conferred honor upon their Alma Mater by distinguished scholarship and exemplary character as undergraduates in engineering, or by their attainments as alumni in the field of engineering, and to foster a spirit of liberal culture in the engineering colleges of America." The Louisiana Alpha chapter was established on November 30, 1936, and is the top engineering society on the campus. Its members are chosen from the upper one-fifth of the senior class, or the upper one eighth of the junior class. Distinguished alumni may be elected to membership for outstanding attainments in the engineering profession.

Professional Organizations

Professional organizations are provided for students who wish to know a little more about their chosen field than what is taught in the classroom. They also get acquainted with other students with whom they share the same interests. The professionals promote activities along the lines of their particular fields and spread interest and knowledge in their profession. They foster a fraternal spirit among the members and uphold high standards of scholarship, leadership and character. The wide variation of courses offered at LSU has given birth to a large number of professional organizations.

Agricultural Engineering, Agronomy, Forestry, Poultry, Horticulture, Future Farmers of America, Block and Bridle, Industrial Education, Alpha Zeta, Phi Upsilon, Dairy and Home Economics Clubs are all included.

This year Ag Fair donated $1000 to the J.G. Lee, Jr., Scholarship Fund. They also set up an annual award to be given in memory of Mr. Lee. This award goes to the student outstanding in promotion of Ag Fair activities during the year.

The Ag Council is headed by the officers of the College of Agriculture. Members are the presidents of clubs within the college. Ag Council serves as the co-ordinating body between students and faculty. Ag Fair works with the Ag Council in sponsoring Homecoming Decorations, and the Ag Jambo-ree.

Brazilian students in the United States founded the Association of the Southern Cross. In 1951 the organization came to Louisiana State's campus. The largest part of the members' time is spent in social activities, but cultural and athletic events also play an important part. By unifying the interest of Brazilians and Americans, they work for a mutual benefit of all involved.

Picnics, parties, reunions, and athletic games are among the many social events. Just as a native of Louisiana does, they anticipate the colorful festivities of the Mardi Gras season. The party they have then is the crowning event of their social year.

Looking for a civil engineering student? Try the drawing room first. This is the place he calls home. A glance into this room anytime, day or night, will show several engineers industriously pushing their slide rules, trying to finish designs of a bridge, a building, or anything else that needs to be designed.

Second in importance to his slide rule is the American Society of Civil Engineers. Here all is not work and no play. Opportunities for becoming better acquainted with his classmates and professors are provided. Every semester the A.S.C.E. has a picnic and everybody has a heck of a good time.

The main objective of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers is to give hopeful mechanical engineers an insight into their chosen field. Promoting the advancement and dissemination of knowledge concerning practices in industry as well as the theory of mechanical engineering falls within their realm.

From early morning until late afternoon, the mechanical engineer stays in labs and classes. He runs through this routine as regularly as some of the machines he works with.

A.S.M.E. gives him a chance to relax. He furthers his social life by contacts with professors and students. A great deal of time is spent making professional contacts which will serve him in his future field.

Western jeans and ten-gallon hats are a sure sign of a Block and Bridle Club member. Between classes the south end of the campus where the barns and coliseum are located swarms with them.

Most of these agriculture students have some special interest in livestock. Twice a month they get together, and talk of rodeos, girl friends, and tests fill the room. But they do get down to business and make plans for judging and showmanship contests, banquets, and rodeos. Each year they invite the student body to don their western clothes and join in the student rodeo. This means fun for all—those who win, those who lose, and those who just watch.

Dairy Science

Majors in Dairy Production and Dairy Manufacturing make up a large part of the Dairy Science Club. This is the student chapter of the American Dairy Science Association. The group stays busy promoting dairying in Louisiana, encouraging leadership, scholarship, and fellowship among members, and providing educational and recreational activities.

Among the outstanding dairymen visiting here this year was Dr. D. V. Josephson, the national vice president. A highlight of the year was the success made by the judging team. At Fort Worth they placed first, at Memphis—second, and in national competition at Waterloo, Iowa—tenth. The annual intercollegiate judging contest, spring banquet, and dedication of the new beautiful Dairy Science Building filled out the year's schedule.

Furthering cultural, civic, and commercial welfare is the aim of Delta Sigma Pi. Beta Zeta chapter of this national Commerce and Business Administration Fraternity was founded at L.S.U. in 1929. Members are not affiliated with any other professional fraternity within their college.

In fulfilling their purpose the "Deltasigs" find they are kept busy. They try to foster the study of business, encourage scholarship and social activities among the students, and promote mutual advancement through group research and practice.

Rush parties to increase membership are held twice a year. An initiation and banquet is held for new members each semester. Chapter Birthday and Founders' Day Celebration are other social high-lights. Members sponsor an annual contest to choose the "Rose of Delta Sig."

 HAROLD JACOBS ..... Vice President
 MARTIN D. MARTIN ..... Secretary
 EUGENE BLASHAK ..... Treasurer

Epsilon Pi Tau keys symbolize leaders in the field of vocational education. The organization's three ideas are: SKILL—the use of tools and the shaping of materials to serve man's desires; SOCIAL EFFICIENCY—the ability to live in peace and with profit among his fellowmen; and RESEARCH—the search for truth.

The members of this professional society can be found distributed among the Industrial Arts Education classes. They constantly work toward those goals which they have set for the members of Epsilon Pi Tau.

Meetings are characterized by discussions of various problems and ways of furthering Industry and Vocational Education. Then another month of work until the next meeting.

These Future Farmers are at the present slaving away in Vocational Agriculture classes. Here they are learning what they hope will make tomorrow's agriculture even greater than today's. The L.S.U. chapter elected Deanna June Major as their Sweetheart for the year.

During the year they conducted the area and state high school F.F.A. judging contest. They work with the Ag Fair Association and Alpha Tau Alpha in cooperative activities. There's also time for fun as proved by this year's Bar-beque.

The chapter lead by Dr. Morris Abrams culminated a successful year with a banquet held in honor of the graduating seniors.

Most any time of the day (or night), you will find us slaving away in Peabody Hall, the Lab School, or the library. You're right, we are the future educators of the nation. In the midst of this picture of industry, you'll find us haunting the coffee shop, Tiger Town, and other places of interest. You see, we have a wide variety of personalities as well as activities.

F.T.A. is a professional organization designed to foster interest in education and to keep its members well informed on educational matters. Members serve as aids at the October Conference for the NEA and LEA. Representatives are sent to the annual meeting of teachers and educators in New Orleans.

Domestic and professional attitudes are developed in the Home Ec Club. Many of its members are working toward professions in the home economics field. Others are just preparing for the role of most every girl—that of being a home maker.

The year was started with a big square dance in October. The Block and Bridle Club was co-sponsor of the dance. The members are hoping this will get to be a traditional affair of the Agriculture College.

The Homecoming Barbeque, the Ag Jambo-ree, and work at the spring rodeo keep these girls busy through the year. In the spring, the club elects as its most outstanding member the girl that has shown most interest and helpfulness in the club.

TRAVIS BURNETT ..... Secretary-Treasurer
GEORGE SOULE ..... Reporter

Founded in 1946, the L.S.U. Horticulture Club is a locally organized group. Keeping up with their own activities and those of the Ag Fair is a job which keeps their hands full. The fall banquet for new members, and the spring barbeque take them through the year. Along the way, they try their skill at intramural sports.

This year was a traveling year for many of the members. The club went on a sight-seeing trip to Mobile, Alabama. A delegation attended the convention of the Collegiate Branch of the Southern Section of the American Society for Horticultural Science.

These Horticultural majors and minors attempt to commend the worthy deeds of both their members and alumni.

"Golden L"—symbol of participation and lettering in varsity athletic activities. L.S.U.'s well-rounded athletic program makes possible a wide representation among the membership. Their aim is to foster a spirit of good sportsmanship. The three L's are stressed as qualifications for the lettermen to become members. They live a life of leadership among men and loyalty to L.S.U.

Athletes look with anticipation to the annual football banquet where new lettermen are announced and awards are made. Another enjoyable get-together is the spring picnic.

As "Conquerors of Space," the members of La Clef have little hope of ever leading an exploratory force to the moon, but they do have aspirations of being bright stars on the horizon of architecture. They hope to manipulate successfully those spaces in which we live. La Clef, in attempting to launch architectural students toward their destination, lit the fuse early this year by having a dynamic speaker describe what to expect on the journey through architectural practice. With a burst of new power, the second stage propelled the students further toward their goal with competitions, films, demonstrations, and more excellent speakers. The end of the year found the students anticipating further instruction on the conquering of space.

Poultry Science Club

Poultry raising and its problems are the common interests of the members of the Poultry Science Club. Membership is taken from the College of Agriculture. These members are super-salesmen which they prove during the year as they stage projects to support their club. They sell turkeys at Thanksgiving and Christmas, roosters and broilers throughout the year, and soft drinks at the annual spring rodeo.

Each year one of the members is sent as a delegate to the national convention. Other members make up the Poultry judging team which competes with other college teams.

Red letter days on the social calendar are the winter banquet and spring barbeque.

The Venezuelan Center has been active since 1948. Its membership has increased through the years with the increase of Venezuelan students on campus.

Here's a place where Venezuelan students get together once a week to chew the fat, plan a Venezuelan style barbeque or other social activities. The Center sponsors a banquet for graduating students at the end of each term. Also sponsored are conferences of a professional character. Once a month speakers are invited and the conferences range from Agriculture to Engineering and Geology. Films of the vast improvements undergone by Venezuela during the last few years are shown.

Sharp-shooters of the Rifle Club make up the membership of the L.S.U. Rifle and Pistol Teams. Members of these teams are continually competing among themselves for top score on the rifle range. The teams compete with teams from other colleges in both postal and shoulder to shoulder matches. These teams are affiliated with the N.R.A. which is the national association for all shooting enthusiasts.

One of the major projects of the club is a marksmanship and safety training program for the campus. Each March the high scorers of the Rifle Club attend the Annual Southwest District Matches which are held in El Paso. Scores of L.S.U. team members are sent to national headquarters to compete for the Hearst Trophy. Team members practice all year in hopes of capturing some of these trophies.

This year began with a barbecue to introduce the new members to the club. Two weeks later came a dance at the Lion's Club Lodge for the members of the Society who attended summer camp in 1956.

In September, the Society of Foresters initiated proceedings to incorporate.

Forestry Field Day was observed at Camp Garrison during October. The main attraction of this annual affair is the initiation of new members into the Society.

Homecoming was also important to the Society this year because the organization won first place in its division with their unique model of Paul Bunyan.

The major event of the forestry social calendar was the Paul Bunyan Christmas Dance which was held at the Lion's Club Lodge on December 8.

A spring barbecue is an annual affair held to honor the new club officers.

Ambitious Paul Bunyans attend a Society of Foresters meeting.

Graduate students in the School of Social Welfare band together to form the Social Welfare Student Association. This group was organized at Louisiana State in 1939.

The Association works to promote fellowship among the students in the school. Good relations between the faculty and students also comes under their services. Annually they hold a banquet which is fun for both groups. The L.S.U. Association co-operates with student bodies from other schools to promote social work.

At each fall Homecoming, an open house is held for alumni.

After World War II, the student body at L.S.U. began growing by leaps and bounds. Most of those enrolling were veterans. The need for a campus organization to unite these ex-warriors resulted in the establishment in 1954 of the Veterans Club—an organization through which veterans could share in campus activities. Each year the club sponsors entertainment and fellowship for the veterans.

Women students living in the Baton Rouge area have their own special organization called W.O.C. They are represented in A.W.S. and on the Judicial Board. Participation in the homecoming decorations contest brought them a cup for third place in the "Other Organizations" category.

Two programs for freshman girls started the year's projects. Speakers were Dean Helen Gordon and Miss Ione Burden. Members worked in the "Dollars for Hungary" drive this year.

Blanche Blalock, Carolyn Duplantis, Barbara Le Blanc, and Elinor Dixon were W.O.C.'s in this year's Darling Contest. Carolyn Duplantis and Barbara LeBlanc were also military sponsors.

Competition in athletics is for the weaker sex too. This fact is proven by the Women's Recreational Association's program each year. Both groups and individuals fight for supremacy in tennis, badminton, paddle ball, basketball, baseball, and volley ball along with many other sports. Their fall swimming meet always draws a big group of campus observers. These avid fans see many campus bathing beauties skim through the water at Olympic speeds.

W.R.A. is open to all women students who have participated in two intramural sports. Their goal is to further interests and activities according to the highest and soundest standards of sports and recreation.

Alpha Omega Alpha

Beta chapter of Alpha Omega Alpha was installed at the Medical Center in 1949. Members try to encourage personal honesty and the spirit of medical research among all members of the medical profession. Alpha Omega Alpha is the only order of its kind in medical schools on this continent.

Members include undergraduates who have given promise of becoming leaders in their professions. Physicians and scientists who have attained distinction in any worthy line of human endeavor are honorary members.

Each year the organization offers addresses by distinguished members of the medical profession on significant trends in medicine.

Nu Sigma Nu

Nu Sigma Nu, a professional medical fraternity established in 1882, is represented by chapters in nearly all of the major accredited medical schools in the United States and Canada. Beta Psi chapter was established at LSU School of Medicine in 1951.

Nu Sigma Nu provides its members with fellowship and opportunity for transference of mutual thought and discussion on medical topics. The fraternity also forms a rapport between student members and faculty alumni.

A well-rounded social calendar gives Nu Sigma Nu members a means of relaxation from the scholastic aspect of Med School life. A highlight of the fraternity's activities is the annual lectureship which is eagerly awaited by the respective members and the student body as a whole.

Phi Beta Pi

Phi Beta Pi is a national medical fraternity founded in 1891 at Western Pennsylvania Medical College. Among its thirty-nine active chapters is Beta Zeta chapter established at LSU Med School in 1933.

Phi Beta Pi offers opportunities in the field of medical education to its members through discussion groups, guest speakers, and forums. Beta Zeta sponsors an annual lectureship in honor of Dr. George McCoy, former head of the Department of Preventive Medicine at LSU.

Through such social activities at Christmas, Mardi Gras, and spring dances, Phi Beta Pi seeks to further a well-balanced student life. Several informal parties fill in between.

Lambda Sigma of Phi Chi came to the L.S.U. School of Medicine in 1932. It was the first medical fraternity founded on the campus. Lambda Sigma is one of the fifty-eight chapters of Phi Chi International, founded in March, 1889, at the University of Vermont.

The year gets into swing with a swirl of rush parties. Some of the chapter's annual functions are the Phi Chi "Bougalie Ball," a spring formal, a senior banquet, wiener roasts, and several informal dances. A highlight of each year is the annual Urban Maes Memorial Lectureship, honoring one of the great men of Phi Chi and the medical profession. Phi Chi provides the necessary professional and social fellowship needed by medical students. Its aims are to promote better understanding and study among its members.

Surgical Undergraduate Society

1934 marked the organization of the Undergraduate Surgical Society at Louisiana State Medical Center. Junior and Senior students are chosen for membership on the basis of their scholastic achievements. The purpose of the organization is to further advance studies in surgery and its various branches, and to encourage the individual members to do scientific investigations of their own. The aims of the society are achieved mainly through extra-curricular group discussions and approved lectureships under the guidance of the surgical staff of the Medical Center.

Undergraduate Medical Society

Undergraduate Medical Society is an honorary society for juniors and seniors. Members spend much time on topics and problems of general medicine and its allied operations. Each year a banquet is held to end the year. A highlight of this banquet is the presentation of an award to the member who has demonstrated those qualities considered most desirable in the practice of medicine.

Religious Organizations

Religious organizations are maintained at LSU for the students to worship, study, and serve in the denomination of their preference. High scholastic, moral, and social standards are upheld by all of the groups. Wholesome programs of study and education are provided for the membership—programs to increase their interest and understanding of their religion and their fellow man. As an annual project of all of the organizations, Religious Emphasis Week reaches out into all branches of college endeavor to further the ideals of the group as a whole. The religious organizations provide that element in the life of the student which is needed for a complete and satisfying college career.

Baptist Student Union

Baptist Student Union is an organization for Baptist and Baptist preference students. It trains college youth in Christian living and Christian leadership.

BSU functions through an executive council of twenty-two students, a faculty advisor, and a student director. These, with the help of many committee members and a freshman council, promote a four-fold program for spiritual, mental, social and physical growth. Baptist Student Union seeks to meet these needs through daily spiritual activity, prayer, Bible study, wholesome social life, Christian vocational guidance, international outlook, co-operation with local churches, personal evangelism and missionary participation.

It helps to make college life Christian, spirituality pre-eminent, student friendships happy, and student Christianity maximum.
